Byrd Relief Party Hurled Back by Gale

Markers to Admiral's Hut Under Snow; Cold 71 Below.

Eventually Leader Will Be Reached, but Job Is Difficult.

Little America, Antarctica, July 23 (Via McKay Radio) (U.P.).—A relief party dispatched by tractor to bring Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd back to Little America from his isolated base 123 miles south on the barrier was forced by blizzards and exceeding cold to turn back tonight.

The party, headed by Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, second in command of the Byrd South Polar Expedition, had reached the 50-mile depot, but lost the markers beyond that, and decided to turn back.

Dr. Poulter reported by radio that the flags were buried in drifts and that it was inadvisable to proceed around the dangerous Valley of Crevasses.

He apparently was reluctant to rely on navigation alone to carry him around the crevass-riven area just south of the depot. Byrd had instructed him on starting not to take chances with the lives of any of the men, and Paulter believed he was following orders to return and await a more favorable start.

60-Mile Blizzard Howls.

Furthermore, a blizzard was reported heading toward camp, 20 miles south of Little America, and to continue through the storm would have been impossible, even with markers. The temperature, going to 71 degrees below zero here, added to the danger of remaining in the open too long.

The wind rose and a blizzard grew with amazing force in each gust, the storm registering 60 miles an hour. It was blacker than the inside of a derby hat out in that howling gale.

However, the party of five in the tractor group reported no particular damage so far. They carried full camping equipment, and on the body of their big tractor is a cabin holding two folding bunks and a stove.

The party had traveled 130 nautical miles to make their 50 miles, and were just short of being half-way to the Boiling Advance Weather Base where Byrd awaited their coming after nearly four months of isolation, observing meteorological data.

To Get There Eventually.

There was no fear that the tractor party eventually would not be able to locate Byrd's cabin buried under the snows, but the broken trail will make it difficult.

Since 2:30 p. m. last Friday, when the tractor left Little America in a snowstorm for Byrd's base, the heavy machine zigzagged over the barrier with members of the party scouting ahead on skis trying to pick up the trail. Dr. Poulter swept the snows with a powerful searchlight as they moved slowly along in the darkness. The long polar winter does not end for another month, when the sun returns.

Poulter reported the men had been without sleep for 34 hours.

New Deal Wins New England's Masses, Worries Industrialists

Taxpayers Begin to Ask Where Cash for Debt Is Coming From.

Members of The Post's National News Bureau have given intensive coverage during the past year to what the Administration was planning and doing. Now, two of its members, Elliott Thurston and Raymond Clapper, are touring the country to record for Post readers their impressions of the reaction to the Government's program.

Mr. Thurston is making a swing through the Eastern and Southern States; Mr. Clapper, who has been covering the San Francisco strike, will make a swing through the West before he accompanies the President home. The following story by Mr. Thurston, first in the series, deals with the situation in New England.

By Elliott Thurston.

Boston, July 23.—What does New England think of the New Deal?

The answer is to be found in economic conditions and their reflection in politics. As accurately as can be judged from a large composite of opinion among bankers, business men, political leaders and the laity, the New Deal would be overwhelmingly indorsed if submitted to a vote today.

A great majority of the bankers and industrialists of New England would be against it. But the great mass of voters would be for it. President Roosevelt's personal prestige and popularity with the large run of voters remain unimpaired. The upper crusts of the social-economic scale are hostile or dubious, for the most part. The other strata, preponderating by more than 3 to 1, are strongly pro-Roosevelt.

Business Doing Well.

If business conditions were bad this would not be so. But allowing for seasonal recession, business in New England, by and large, is flourishing. From the focal point of Boston, what seems to be a dependable picture of New England may be had from business and banking leaders, including the Federal Reserve Bank.

I have talked with a large number of representative bankers and business men. With few exceptions they have no great complaint to make of things as they are, but they are fearful of the future. Speaking as of the moment, they agree pretty generally up this analysis:

New England was not as hard hit as other sections of the country. The old Yankee virtues of thrift, of saving, were not a myth. Vast numbers of the people had something saved against a rainy day. Welfare workers have repeatedly discovered that applicants for relief had tidy savings accounts. Only the other day one such applicant was found to have a savings account of $10,000. He explained that he was holding it for a rainy day. "Well," the ERA official told him, "so far as we are concerned, it's raining right now."

Boom Crash Not So Big.

Because of thrift, prudence in management and good banking supervision, there was no epidemic of bank failures. Nor did this region soar as high as many others in real estate and the other speculative manias of the late twenties. When the crash came New England did not have so far to fall—and it had more to fall back upon. For example, the shoe industry, one of the biggest next to textiles, has shown not more than a 10 per cent spread between the peak and the bottom.

Without exception, industrialists, business men, economists here-

'Pettifogging' By U.S. Is Hit In Greif Case

Government Loses in Direct Test of Right to Recall Eagle.

Baltimore, July 23 (U.P.).—Judge William C. Coleman, in Federal Court late today, upheld an order restraining the Government from depriving L. Greif & Brothers of its NRA Blue Eagle, pending an injunction hearing.

A temporary injunction was issued last Friday and it was this order Government attorneys attacked today.

In sustaining the order, Judge Coleman accused the Government of "pettifogging," and ruled the case would be heard on its merits during the September term.

The case is a direct test of NRA's power to withdraw the recovery insignia and is being watched by manufacturers throught the country.

U. S. Policy Criticized.

Curley Hoffpauir, of NRA counsel, was on the witness stand when the court intervened and gave his decision.

"I am sustaining the order because I feel an irreparable damage is threatened to the plaintiff," he said. "They (the company) tried all legal remedies. Mr. Hoffpauir evaded the issue when he said no one could withdraw Blue Eagles from a business firm except Administrator Hugh S. Johnson or the President. This is refuted by the recovery administration itself."

Hoffpauir said he had referred only to Blue Eagles displayed in windows and not the small eagles which appear on manufactured articles.

"That is nothing more nor less than pettifogging," the judge said.

Vital Issues Evaded.

"I can not refrain from saying I certainly am not impressed with the attitude of the Government in a matter of as great importance as this.

"This court has before it a surfeit of counsel representing all agencies of the Government involved. It seems that the Government authorities would welcome this opportunity willingly to test their authority under this act.

"Government authorities will not get from this court any encouragement in the sort of tactics shown here today. I am not referring now to the questions you have raised as to the jurisdiction of this court. I do feel that the questions have no merit in them, however.

"I am referring to the attitude on the part of the Government shown here, which was nothing short of evasion of the basic questions raised.

NRA Rules Vague.

"This act expressly provides that United States district attorneys are the very ones that are looked to to enforce the act. There is no provision in the law, unfortunately, setting up proper machinery to enforce their rules and regulations. It is vague, much too vague to accomplish efficient operations.

"We have here a vivid example of one company which in good faith tried to get information on what was the proper thing to do. I am satisfied from the evidence that their efforts were in good faith. Failing to get this information, they have every right to resort to this court now.

"I am not attempting to rule on the validity of the NRA itself or any of its sections objected to. It is a question to be determined after both sides have been heard."

Dillinger Tipster Girl Guarded From Guns Of Desperado's Aids

$10,000 Reward Is Held Motive for Leading Bandit to Death.

Coroner's Jury Praises Killers

Chicago, July 23 (AP).—A "girl in a red dress" tonight was popularly credited with being the "finger" who put the desperado, John Dillinger, "on the spot" last night.

With a male companion, the girl was said to be secluded under police and Federal guard in a downtown hotel suite, protected from the possible vengeance of the remnants of the Dillinger gang.

While Melvin H. Purvis, the youthful head of the Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation here, refused to disclose whether it was a woman's tip which led Dillinger to a death trap outside a North Side theater, statements by Chicago and Indiana police pointed to its probability.

"All I can say is that I won't discuss it," Purvis said. "Wouldn't I be a fine guy to reveal a tip?"

Reward Lure Held Motive.

"The girl in the red dress" was reported to have been one of two women said to have attended the theater with Dillinger. Chicago policemen said the two women emerged arm in arm with Dillinger, separated as they left the playhouse and that the one in red preceded him across the alley where the desperado was shot down.

Both women, the policemen said in their report, were taken into custody by the Federal agents.

The supposed motive which caused the "moll" to betray her bandit companion was the lure of the $10,000 Federal reward. This angle caused police to speculate whether the enormous loot seized in the desperado's many bank raids had dwindled to the few dollars found in his pocket.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury brought in a formal verdict of justifiable homicide, praised the unnamed slayers, cited the death of Dillinger as an annihilating blow at organized crime and demanded that the remainder of the gang be brought in "dead or alive."

Fatal Wounds Described.

Coroner's Physician Jerome Kearns described the wounds which brought death to the long hunted Dillinger.

"The bullet that killed Dillinger," he said, "was the one that entered the back of his neck right at the shoulder, ripped through into his head, cutting the spinal column,

Wheat Losses Becloud Parley, Stiffen Prices

World Conference Faces Riddle in Limiting Production.

Unabated drought inroads on Western grains yesterday took on new international significance, as the Agriculture Department reported a world wheat crop 400,000,000 bushels under a year ago.

At the same time, the department's Bureau of Agricultural Economics forecast strong wheat prices for the remainder of the season, with sharp fluctuations, an interesting development in light of the recent speculative shift from securities to commodities trading.

"Since United States supplies are just about equal to domestic utilization, plus a normal minimum carryover, small changes in crop prospects may be expected to result in large changes in United States prices," read the bureau's price statement.

Loss Prelude to Parley.

The rigidly curtailed world wheat crop estimates were announced as the blistering drought extended its toll to European crops, in an unheralded preliminary to the international conference in London August 14. Representatives of this country will sit again with delegates of other nations in an effort to allot world quotas. On the success of the conference hinges the extent of this country's 1935 wheat planting program.

Yesterday's Agriculture Department estimates of a 3,293,000,000 bushel world wheat crop, 400,000,000 less than last year, left Russia and China out of the picture. Also excluding these two countries production in the Northern hemisphere was said to be 300,000,000 bushels under a year ago.

Bureau experts attributed the world cut principally to drought conditions in this country and in

Bishop Faber Found Dead; Cause Sought

Glacier Park, Mont., July 23 (AP).—The Right Rev. William F. Faber, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Montana for 24 years, was found dead today in Paradise Creek, 2½ miles from Two-Medicine Chalets in the towering Rockies of Glacier National Park.

Park rangers and workers, campers and Civilian Conservation Corps men had searched for the bishop since last Friday. Hhe disappeared on one of his customary strolls from the lodge.

The body was found by Ranger Clyde Fauley, wedged between two boulders on the shore of the stream. The bishop's head and shoulders were out of water and only the lower part of the body was submerged.

Whether he died from drowning or from injury and exposure was not immediately determined.

From the distance he had traveled, rangers believed Bishop Faber had been gone from the chalets possibly three hours when he stumbled, confused, into the stream. He had left the trail nearly a mile behind and apparently had wandered through the forests.

Bishop Coadjutor H. H. H. Fox, of Billings, announced that immediately after the inquest he would start at once for Helena with the body, arriving there tomorrow.

The dead bishop, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., succeeded the missionary bishop, Leigh Brewer, in Montana. In observance of his twenty-fourth year here, a celebration had been planned for this fall by the diocese. Before coming to Montana, Bishop Faber served parishes in Geneva, N. Y.; Lockport, N. Y., and in Detroit.

Surviving are his son, Dr. H. H. Faber, of San Francisco, en route to Helena by plane when the body was found, and a daughter, Dorothy, of Helena.

Langer Seeks Nye Subpena By Legislature

Wants Senator Quizzed Regarding Charges of Graft.

Bismarck, N. Dak., July 23 (AP).—William Langer, North Dakota's deposed Governor, today asked the special Legislature meeting at his call in defiance of Acting Governor Ole H. Olson's revocation to subpena Gerald P. Nye, United States Senator from North Dakota, for questioning regarding the Senator's charges that graft existed in North Dakota State departments.

Nye, who made his allegations in St. Paul recently, mentioned a "beer racket" and a "pardon racket."

Saturday, in a "message" to the Legislature Langer asked that body to impeach him if his conviction for defrauding the Government was found "just and proper."

Neither house had a quorum as Attorney General P. O. Sathre, favorable to Langer, told legislators in an opinion that the House could meet for impeachment purposes whether the Senate met or not. The Senate has never mustered a quorum in its three sessions, and Langer forces have given up hope. Since the House was friendly to Langer, it was expected impeachment proceedings would result in clearing him.

Langer was removed after his recent Federal Court conviction. He is ready to take the stump in an effort to regain his office. His wife, who may be called upon to replace him at the head of the State Republican ticket if he also is found ineligible to be a candidate, was to accompany him.

Olson has refused to recognize the Legislature, contending it is meeting illegally, and denied all pleas that he himself call the Assemblies into emergency session.

Senator Nye (Republican, N. Dak), is en route to Washington and is expected to arrive today, at which time his office force plans, according to the Associated Press, to inform him of the demand of William Langer, deposed Governor of North Dakota, that he prove his charges of graft in the State Prison Board.

Man Accused Of Killing Aunt

Witnesses Say Quarrel Led to Shooting Near Cumberland.

Cumberland, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Raymond Casserly, 34, was held by a coroner's jury here today, charged with slaying his aunt, Mrs. Alice Hise, last night outside Dawson, near here.

The shooting occurred at the home of Casserly's mother, Mrs. William Kuykendall, and followed a drinking party, officers say. Testimony showed that Mrs. Hise and Arch Finley had been at the Kuykendall home. They left and returned. When Mrs. Kuykendall refused the offer of a drink, the women quarrelled, whereupon, according to a statement officers say Casserly made, he got his shotgun and fired. Mrs. Hise was shot in the abdomen.

Her sister, Mrs. Kuykendall, and other members of the family testified that Mrs. Hise and Casserly had quarrelled prior to the shooting.

Casserly was arrested as he was preparing to leave for West Virginia early today, officers said.

Navy Seaplanes Search For Stray Racing Yacht

Honolulu, July 23 (AP).—Navy seaplanes late today began searching for the Scaramouche, the only yacht in the race from San Pedro to Honolulu which has neither finished nor been sighted.

The Scaramouche, which left San Pedro with 11 others July 4, is skippered by William Tompkins, of Long Beach, Calif. Three women are among those aboard. The race was won by Harold Dillingham's yacht Manuiwa, which arrived July 17.

Police Tear Gas Routs Strikers at Tool Plant

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 23 (U.P.). State police used tear gas to disperse a crowd of striking union workers and sympathizers at the plant of the Ames Baldwin Wyoming Tool Works here today, after strikers purportedly attempted to prevent a small number of employes from going to work. Several persons were clubbed. State troopers were on guard.

Karl Summers, president of the union, declared the strikers seek another election, claiming a previous election conducted by the company was illegal. The majority of workers voted for a company union.

U. S. Heat Toll Mounts to 404; Mercury Lower Here at 88

10 a. m.	79	2 p. m.	86
11 a. m.	82	3 p. m.	86
Noon	84	4 p. m.	88
1 p. m.	85	5 p. m.	87

Breathing death and destruction across the Middle West and the Great Plains, the heat wave brought its total of lives claimed to 404 yesterday, while Washington basked in the comparatively cool maximum temperature of 88.

Cloudless skies and a blazing sun, in addition to the death toll, continued their blight on crops. The Associated Press reported drought intensity and complete plant destruction were threatened in many of the worst areas, and other areas, heretofore merely "unpleasantly hot," faced serious results.

Wandering in bewildered herds, in quest of drinking holes, thousands of cattle have been lost from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains, and thousands more have been given up at forced sales.

Crop losses, experts said, are many hundreds of millions of dollars.

As temperatures mounted toward Sunday highs, which were in Oakes, N. Dak., 111; in five Illinois cities, 106; in Lincoln, Nebr., 96; in Campbell, Minn., 109, and generally in the Southwest more than 100, human suffering increased.

Minnesota reported the current wave responsible for 24 deaths; Indiana, 12; Illinois, 113; Nebraska, 47; Minnesota, 17; Iowa, 23; Missouri, 135; Kansas, 13; Michigan, 13, and Pennsylvania, 7.

Prize Package Candy Outlawed Under Code

NRA yesterday outlawed the prize package candy box after July 30, the Associated Press reports.

The prohibition against "break and take" and "pick and draw" packages in which the lottery element is present was written into the candy manufacturing and wholesale confectionery codes. A stay until July 30 was allowed for exhaustion of present stocks.

Women, Children Capture Escaped Convict Suspect

Salt Lake City, July 23 (AP).—Two women and a number of children today captured a man described by police as an escaped New Jersey convict.

Mrs. H. Snelgrove led the attack against a man she found in her front yard. Seizing his shirt, she dragged him to the rear of the house, where Mrs. N. P. Lelonde and several children joined in the capture.

"When we got there, half the neighborhood was sitting on him," said Detective C. H. Olson.

The man was declared by Olson to be William Voorhees, 31, wanted at the Bordentown, N. J., prison farm, from which he assertedly escaped June 15.

Train Crashes Stalled Truck; Five Injured

Five persons were injured, one seriously, when a Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis electric train crashed into a stalled truck on the railway's right of way at Dodge Park, Md., yesterday.

Both cars of the flyer, which was reported to have been traveling at 60 miles per hour, caught fire after the crash. The heavy truck was demolished, and the driver saved his life by leaping as the speeding train bore down upon him.

Herbert Stinchcomb, 36, conductor, was the most severely hurt. He suffered painful burns on both arms and hands, and on his face and forehead as he tried to free passengers from the flaming cars.

Stinchcomb, a resident of Baltimore, was taken to University Hospital, Baltimore, in a passing freight train.

Others injured were B. M. Reed, of Tampa, Fla., a passenger, who was cut by glass as he beat out a window; Harry Jackson, a Bladensburg fireman, who was cut as he

"Baby Face" Nelson, Killer of Federal Agent, No. 1 on Wanted List.

"'Baby Face' Nelson's days are numbered. There will never be any let-up until he, John Hamilton and Homer Van Meter are captured, dead or alive."

Saying this, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Department of Justice's division of investigation, added that the killing of John Dillinger is the climax but not the conclusion of his agents' war upon the Dillinger gang.

Most of all, Hoover said, he wants Nelson, for Nelson, alias Lester M. Gillis, killed Special Agent W. Carter Baum, of Washington, when the gang shot its way out of a trap at Little Bohemia, Wis., on April 11.

Gang Torn by Jealousy.

Hoover said that he did not believe any one of these three men would take Dillinger's place as the leader of the gang. Even before Dillinger was shot, he said, the gang was torn by jealousy.

And the conclusion of the manhunt will see the round-up of all those minor satellites and persons who have given aid to the gang as well as the three major members who still survive, Hoover said.

A gang leader is seldom replaced, Hoover said. When Dillinger was killed, the concerted activity of his

The POST Gets the Answers

"How's business?"

"What's going on politically?"

Every one is interested in the answers to these questions. And, in an endeavor to indicate the answers, The Post has sent two members of its staff on a tour of the country to record impressions of political and economic reactions to the New Deal.

Raymond Clapper has been in the West for a week, covering the San Francisco strike. He has now started on a tour of the important economic and political centers west of the Mississippi, which will end when he reaches Washington with the President about August 10.

Elliott Thurston will write what he sees and hears in the Eastern and Southern States. He has just finished a swing through New England and his first article appears in today's editions of The Post.

"Poor Cousin" of Mellon Prefers Poverty to Riches

Pittsburgh, July 23 (AP).—A "poor cousin" of Andrew W. Mellon, the millionaire banker, was found today living in contented poverty amid a scene of empty packing boxes, rusty cans and other tenement debris.

He is gray-haired William Andrew Mellon, son of the late Samuel Mellon, only brother of Judge Thomas Mellon, the noted banker's father.

Investigators, called to the dingy little house tucked away between imposing structures in the Pittsburgh Triangle section by erroneous reports the 60-year-old man was in need, found him living there happily.

"I wouldn't trade this place for the best suite in the best hotel," the Mellon "poor cousin" said. "I need this place, because I can have home-cooked food and because I can read, study, think and dream here."

He disclosed that he slipped into town from the West "some time ago" without the knowledge of the wealthier members of the Mellon family and that he had been on a $1.50 weekly relief roll until Andrew Mellon learned of his presence and offered aid.

In addition to reading and compiling a new genealogy of the Mellon family, he said his only other interest is in a Colorado mine which he hopes to develop.

"I was going to obtain financial aid from sources outside the family," he added, "but then it just happened they became interested and Andy has promised to help me."

William Andrew Mellon once worked in the T. Mellon & Sons Bank, launched in 1870, but after the death of Andrew's father he went West and lost his money in a railroad enterprise.

1,480 on Liner Aground in Fog

Hamburg Vessel Hits Rock Off Faroe Isle While Battling Weather.

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 23 (AP).—The Hamburg-South American liner Monte Rose, with 1,480 persons on board, grounded tonight on a submerged rock off Stroemoe Island in a heavy fog.

Several salvage boats were endeavoring to refloat the liner, but experiencing difficulties.

Hamburg, Germany, July 23 (AP). Officials of the Hamburg-South American Steamship Line said there are 1,200 excursionists, mostly Germans, and a crew of 288 aboard the Monte Rose.

Owners asserted there was no immediate danger to the ship. It was reported here that its watertight bulkheads were closed immediately after the ship struck, and other vessels are standing by. The vessel struck soon after clearing Thorshvn, officials said.

Stroemoe Island is the largest of the Faroe Islands, a small group belonging to Denmark and lying approximately 250 miles north of Scotland, and about equally distant from Southeast Iceland.

killers and bank robbers was struck a deadly blow.

Nelson, who is placed as No. 1 on the department's list of wanted men, was described by Hoover as a "crazy killer." They are all "yellow killers," he said.

Shoots Without Provocation.

"Dillinger would only shoot when he was cornered," Hoover said, "but Nelson will shoot without any provocation."

The vicious Nelson is a little "half-pint" of a man, who was born 25 years ago in Chicago.

He is 5 feet 4¾ inches tall, weighs 130 pounds, has light chestnut hair, yellow and grey eyes and a light complexion.

A newer member of the Dillinger gang, having joined them some time this year, Nelson, or Gillis, was first arrested in Chicago in January, 1931, for robbery.

He was sentenced to Joliet for a term of from one year to life and started serving it on July 17, 1931. Exactly seven months later he escaped and has not been caught.

Aided by Wife.

With Nelson is his wife, Hoover said. She was captured at Little Bohemia, but was paroled. This parole was broken when she went back with him. So she is wanted again.

Next on the department's "wanted" list comes John Hamilton, known as Dillinger's first lieutenant. He is the most intelligent and "steadfast" member of the gang.

Hamilton, 156 pounds in weight and 5 feet 8 inches in height, was given a 25-year sentence for bank robbery at South Bend, Ind., in 1927. He escaped from the Indiana State Prison in Michigan City on September 26, 1933.

The Federal charge against Hamilton is obstruction of justice, the same as against Van Meter. Hamilton also is wanted for murder of Sheriff Jesse Barber in the Lima, Ohio, jail break on October 12, 1932.

Van Meter's Record.

Van Meter, who is 29, was first arrested at Aurora, Ill., where he did a short prison term on a larceny charge. He later was paroled from the Illinois State Prison on a similar charge.

On March 12, 1925, he was arrested at Crown Point, Ind., on two robbery charges. He was committed to the Indiana State Reformatory and later transferred to the Indiana State Prison at Pendleton to serve a sentence of from 10 to 21 years. He was paroled on May 19, 1933.

There are two other men whom the Department of Justice also wants, though neither ever was connected with Dillinger. They are "Pretty Boy" Floyd and Richard Galatas, both wanted for the Kansas City massacre.

Killed Five in Raid.

There, armed with machine guns, they killed Raymond J. Caffrey, a Federal special agent; Otto Reid, chief of police of MacAlester, Okla., and two Kansas City, Mo., police officers and their prisoner, Frank Nash.

Floyd, probably the outstanding bad man of the country now that Dillinger is dead, is 26 years old, 5 feet 8¼ inches in height and 155 pounds in weight.

He has a lengthy criminal record which began when he was arrested for highway robbery at St. Louis in 1925. He last was arrested on a charge of bank robbery at Toledo, Ohio, in 1930. He escaped while en route to the Ohio State Penitentiary and has been at large ever since.

No Convictions Listed.

Galatas, who is 43, 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs 155 pounds, has been arrested in Toledo, Los Angeles, Columbus, Ohio, and Flint, Mich., on suspicion of being a confidence man. The Department of Justice has no record of any convictions.

Of the satellites, hangers on, lawyers, physicians and women who have been associated with the Dillinger gang or have given the gang aid of any sort, Hoover declared that they all will be rounded up.

Two of the women, known as wives of Nelson and Van Meter, are with them at present, Hoover said. Both have broken parole to return to them. They were paroled when they were captured after the unsuccessful Little Bohemia ambuscade.

Reward Up for Nelson.

The Dillinger gang uses women, Hoover said. Sometimes each of the gang would be associating with two or three at the same time.

With the gang constantly hounded by authorities and forced to move from place to place, the women are used to make all the arrangements.

There is a reward for "Baby Face" Nelson. The Federal Government offers $5,000 for his capture, or $2,500 for information leading to his capture.

Nelson, Hoover concluded, is a cheap small-time crook, who would never have been heard of if he hadn't gotten in with Dillinger.

Train for Roosevelt Nearly All Air Cooled

The train that will bring President Roosevelt home from Portland, Oreg., will lack just one car of being the first all air-cooled train to cross the continent, the Associated Press reports.

Stephen T. Early, a secretary to the President, said yesterday he ran out of air-cooled rolling stock before he reached the end of his list of newspaper reporters desiring to make the trip. There will be 40 correspondents and news photographers.

Government Wants These "Yellow Killers"

and emerged through the right eye."

Only one other bullet, he said, punctured the desperado. It cut through the eighth rib, missing the heart by 2 inches and emerging from the left side.

The coroner's jury viewed the body. Except for the attention it created and the bullet holes in it, it differed little from the other bodies in the county morgue. Wired to the great toe of the right foot, like a shipping tag, was a pasteboard slip. It read, "No. 116—July." It indicated that it was the 116th body received during the month.

Father Arrives.

John Dillinger, sr., father of the desperado, and Hubert Dillinger, a half brother, arrived at the McReady undertaking parlor in mid-afternoon in a hearse.

Several hundred inquisitive spectators crowded about the establishment and the services of ten husky patrolmen were required to clear the way for them to enter by a back door.

Police held back a group of about 50 women who attempted to force their way into the rooms. The elder Dillinger, obviously fatigued after his long journey and the sorrow attendant upon his son's violent death, was taken to an upper chamber and given a glass of water.

"I suspect John would rather it had been that way," the Indiana farmer said of his son's death. "I hope John had enough money on him to pay his funeral expenses. If he didn't, it will be an awful burden, but I'll do the best I can."

Funds Total $7.80.

Only $7.80 was found in Dillinger's pockets and police said they had found no clew to other funds.

An "inside story" of the killing of John Dillinger gave much of the credit to Sergt. Martin Zarkovich, of the East Chicago, Ind., police force, a friend of Officer William P. O'Malley, who was slain in the $20,000 holdup of the First National Bank of East Chicago on January 15.

Zarkovich, it was said, spent his furlough on Chicago's North Side and made the acquaintance of a woman friend of Dillinger, believed to have been the "girl in the red dress." The acquaintance was made through a "talkative" male friend in a saloon.

The policeman "played up" to the girl, pointed out what could be done with her share of the reward, and persuaded her to sell out Dillinger.

Tip to Police.

Yesterday afternoon, the story went, the woman got word to Zarkovich that Dillinger would attend the Biograph Theater at night. The woman was believed to have accompanied him to the movie.

Fifteen Federal agents under the command of Purvis stationed themselves around the theater. For two hours and four minutes they waited. Then Dillinger came out. He turned East and walked within 3 feet of Purvis, standing in a doorway, as he gave the signal.

As the desperado reached the alley the pistols of Federal agents barked, and Dillinger fell mortally wounded, the victim, it was believed, of his weakness for women.

If there were friends or relatives of the dead man at the inquest they did not make it known. Nor were there any of the Indiana policemen, who were credited with furnishing the information on which Dillinger was trapped. The witnesses included two of the Federal agents who participated in the killing.

Carried Girl's Picture.

A fingerprint expert testified that although Dillinger had attempted to remove his fingerprint whorls he was convinced that the body was really that of the Indiana robber.

In the slain man's clothing was found a clip to fit the pistol, which Samuel P. Cowley, a Federal agent, said Dillinger tried to draw just before he was shot. In his watch was a picture of a woman, identified as that of Mary Longacre, of Cincinnati, one of Dillinger's associates.

The definite assertion that there were two women with Dillinger at the theater was made by Detective Frank L. Slattery, one of the Sheffield avenue policemen called to the scene by theater attaches, who did not know the purpose of the Federal men's visit.

He said he saw Dillinger leaving the theater with two women, one on each side of him.

"As they reached the sidewalk, the three turned north and the Government men and the East Chicago police officers began to close in on them. The three were lost to my view for a moment just before they reached the alley and then I heard the shots.

Women "Disappear."

"My partner and I ran over into the crowd and ran into the same girls. I stopped them—they are in their thirties. They tried to push past me and start to run. A Government man stopped me as I reached for them and said: 'Leave them alone. Don't get mixed up in this. This is a Government job.'

"I looked around and the girls had disappeared."

The authorities were reported to know the identity of the plastic surgeon who endeavored to change the facial appearance of the outlaw. Dillinger's reddish brown mustache and hair were dyed black, and his face had been "lifted" to remove a dimple and scars.

Coroner David Walsh earlier today had directed that a shell found on the sidewalk near Dillinger's body be sent to the Northwestern University School of Crime Detection for examination by ballistic experts on the theory that Dillinger might have shot himself upon seeing that he was trapped.

Later, however, it was pointed out that Dillinger's gun had not been fired.

Women in Life Of Dillinger Came to Grief

Association With Outlaw Ended in Jail Terms for Many.

Chicago, July 23 (AP).—Women have figured prominently in the life of John Dillinger, slain outlaw, and bad luck has been the lot of many. Here is what happened to a few:

Beryl Hovis, of Mooresville, Ind., married him April 12, 1924, when she was only 16, divorced him in 1929 and now happily married to a Morgan County, Indiana, farmer.

Evelyn Frechette, half-breed Indian sweetheart, arrested with him in Tucson, Ariz., as Ann Martin, released, arrested for harboring him in St. Paul apratment from which he shot his way March 31, 1934. Sentenced to two years Federal penitentiary.

With Outlaw in Flight.

Mrs. Beth Green, wife of Eugene Green, who accompanied Dillinger on dash from St. Paul apartment, tried with Frechette woman, sentenced to 18 months.

Mrs. Augusta Salt, nurse for Dr. Clayton May, Minneapolis physician who treated Dillinger's wounds for week following St. Paul escape. Mrs. Salt was acquitted, but May received a 2-year sentence.

Patricia Cherrington was sentenced to two years in prison for harboring Dillinger at the Little Bohemia resort near Mercer, Wis.

Jean Crompton, alias Ann Sothern, given probation on charge of harboring at Little Bohemia, was arrested at Waterloo, Iowa, when Tommy Carroll, Dillinger gangster, was killed by detectives. Returned to Madison, Wis., for parole violation and sentenced to a year and a day in prison.

Others Linked With Him.

Mary Kinder, Indianapolis woman arrested with him at Tucson, Ariz., was released later and now is in Indianapolis.

Mary Longacre, sometimes spelled Longaker, sister of Tommy Jenkins, one of ten men who escaped Indiana State Prison last year and was killed later, whereabouts was unknown. Dillinger was arrested in her home, Dayton, Ohio, September 22, 1933, and placed in jail at Lima, Ohio, where Sheriff Jess Sarber was killed when confederates released Dillinger. The gangster was said to be very "fond" of her.

Sheriff Lillian Holley of Lake County, Ind., also suffered great embarassment when Dillinger walked out of her new "escape-proof" jail on March 3, armed with only a wooden pistol.

Killers of Dillinger Win Indiana's Praise

Indianapolis, July 23 (AP).—Expressions of relief that the long hunt for John Dillinger has been ended and congratulations to the officers who finally brought the desperado to his death came today from Indiana officials.

Gov. Paul V. McNutt, Al G. Feeney, State director of public safety; Wayne Coy, the Governor's secretary, and Attorney General Philip Lutz all praised the work of the Federal agents.

Bulgaria, Soviet Renew Diplomatic Relationship

A formal announcement of the approval of an accord which formed the basis for reestablishment of relations was sent to Moscow.

Dillinger Trap Leader Admits Being "Scared"

Friends Praise Courage of Purvis, However, Citing Danger.

Chicago, July 23 (AP).—Melvin H. Purvis had the "buck fever" last night when John Dillinger walked out of the little North Side theater to his death a few seconds later in an alley.

Purvis, chief of the Chicago bureau of the Department of Investigation, admitted nervousness today, but associates and observers agreed he probably had good reason.

It was Purvis, and not a subordinate, who led the cordon of officers to the Biograph Theater where Dillinger was enjoying the thrills of a gangster film. He personally placed his men and then placed himself "on the spot" as the "finger" to point out the elusive Indiana outlaw as he emerged from the lobby.

Dillinger passed him as he lounged against the wall, but the gunman did not see the signal which closed the police net around him. It was given by Purvis.

Denies Killing Dillinger.

Purvis denied that a bullet from his pistol was the first to smash into Dillinger's body, but associates pointed out that he was closest and also that he has a reputation as a pistol shot.

Slight of stature, Purvis looks even younger than his 30 years and is close mouthed about his work even when it produces such satisfactory results as the removal of America's No. 1 public enemy.

Born in Timmonsville, S. C., of English ancestry, Purvis studied law. He is a graduate of the University of South Carolina. He became a member of the Department of Investigation seven and one-half years ago and came to Chicago in November, 1932.

Purvis has suffered for months from an infection of the nose and throat, but has taken only time enough at various times to pay an occasional visit to hospitals.

Many Traps Failed.

Sleep has been something to do only when there was nothing else in the offing. Each and every tip received by the bureau, regardless of how trivial, was investigated thoroughly. Agents went far afield even to Virginia and Los Angeles. Minor hoodlums were picked up frequently, but Dillinger proved elusive.

Four times Federal operatives swept down on Arlington Race Track. As many more visits were paid to the Cubs and White Sox ball parks to no avail. Restaurants and all the known haunts of Dillinger were shadowed constantly.

Associates and police said Purvis might well have had the "buck fever" last night. Many times before he had set almost certain traps for Dillinger, only to have his quarry escape.

An elaborate trap in Chicago's western suburbs went awry only a few months after Purvis took charge of the Chicago office. Another failed in St. Paul on March 31, when Dillinger shot it out with Federal agents in an apartment building. Another fizzled at the Little Bohemia resort near Mercer, Wis., a few weeks later.

Official howls for Purvis' "scalp" were heard after some of these escapes and it was up to him last night to see that it did not happen again.

sent out by the market Saturday to farmers that they should watch their shipments, were heeded, and normal business resulted.

Heavy shipments at Chicago made trade difficulties. Meanwhile, the excessive heat reduced the consumption of meat.

Due to the drought, the hay crop this year will be the lowest in 40 years, the National Hay Association was informed by experts. Missouri crops were described as "the poorest in history" by experts in Kansas City. Eight counties "down-State," where cotton is the principal product, from the only section of the State where conditions were good.

Where the heat was most intense, weather forecasters saw no relief, and even predicted higher temperatures for today.

Meanwhile the Weather Bureau in Washington informed anxious District residents that there would be little change in temperature today. Refreshing southeast winds will fan the city, which regarded the sudden drop in the mercury almost as a "cool snap."

The average humidity yesterday was 50. The comparative cool is due to an area of cold air over the entire Eastern Seaboard. No heat prostrations were reported to police yesterday.

Firing at U. S. Agents Sealed Bandit's Doom

Auto Theft Only Federal Charge Until St. Paul Raid in March.

When John Dillinger fell dead in an alley beside the Biograph Theater, in Chicago, felled by bullets in the head and chest, he was officially wanted by the Government only for stealing an automobile. The Government wouldn't have had even that much on him if he hadn't transported the car across a State line.

That was on last March 3 when he and a colored fellow prisoner escaped from Lake County Jail, at Crown Point, Ind. Accused of many murders ("He killed at least a half a dozen," officials say), the United States Government's only charge against Dillinger was that he had violated the Dyer act in crossing a State boundary in a stolen automobile.

So it was not until then that the Division of Investigation of the Division of Investigation of the Department of Justice entered the lurid case.

"But we didn't begin the intensive hunt until March 31," J. Edgar Hoover, head of the investigation division, said yesterday, "when the battle of Lexington avenue was fought."

Start of Merciless Manhunt.

His reference was to the unsuccessful St. Paul raid when Dillinger and several confederates shot their way out of a trap.

"Dillinger shot at our agents and that, as we say, sealed his doom," declared Hoover, who is still elated over the coup Sunday night. None of the raiding party was injured, but the Hoosier gunman had fired at a Federal officer and thus sealed his doom."

From that gun battle dated the merciless manhunt, destined to last 113 days, which covered every State in the Union at one time or another, but which always was directed from the stuffy building at Vermont avenue and K street, which is headquarters to every "D. J." man.

Vengeance is an ugly word, but no other can describe the spirit with which the agents were imbued when they hunted Dillinger—"He shot at our agents"—and which they draw upon as they push the search for Lester M. Gillis, alias "Baby Face" Nelson—"He killed Carter Baum."

To Prosecute Aids.

Not only will the chase after Nelson be intensified, but the Government will prosecute relentlessly all who gave assistance of any sort to the slain leader, Hoover said.

"That goes for relatives, friends, doctors—anyone."

If relatives are to be included in the dragnet, what of the desperado's father, a respected old farmer in Mooresville, Ind., who made no secret of the fact that he gave his son food and shelter on several occasions while he was a fugitive?

It was apparent Hoover did not like the question.

"We can't say anything about that yet," he replied.

From an office memorandum he read names of eight men and women who have been arrested for helping Dillinger in one way or another. One of them, Dr. Clayton E. May, of Minneapolis, was convicted of giving him medical attention and is serving a prison sentence.

Others Held In Case.

The others are Bessie Skinner, alias Green, widow of a slain gangster; Evelyn Frechette, one of Dillinger's sweethearts; Mrs. Isaac Steve, sister of John Hamilton; Marie M. Comforti, alias Mrs. Homer Van Meter; Mrs. Edward A. Crompton, alias Mrs. Tommy Carroll; Mrs. Helen Gillis, alias Mrs. "Baby Face" Nelson, and H. G. Lebman.

All are in prison or in custody awaiting trial except Marie Comforti and Mrs. Gillis. The charge against Lebman was that he sold machine guns to the gang.

The Comforti and Gills women were arrested and then convicted and put on probation by a Federal judge. Describing the "mamby pamby" procedure which set them free again, Hoover was vehement in his denunciation of a bench which allows such dangerous characters their liberty after they have pleaded guilty.

"With their women those rates have a big advantage. They rent their rooms, bring them food and perform other assistance of great benefit. Without the use of women, the Dillinger gang is sorely handicapped."

Women Figure In Trap.

Even so, women played an important part in bringing America's most hunted criminal to his doom. Hoover confirmed reports that two girls accompanied Dillinger to the theater, escaping in the melee. He was noncommittal, however, on the unauthenticated rumor that it was a woman who actually "put the finger" on him.

Pleading guilty with the Comforti and Gillis women was Mrs. Tommy Carroll. She, too, was placed on probation only to be recaptured two weeks later in the gun battle in which her purported husband was shot to death. The other two women have rejoined the remnant of the gang, Hoover believes.

He disclosed that the Biograph motion picture house, off Chicago's Gold Coast, was not the only one which had been "covered" the last few days.

"We had knowledge that Dillinger was going to attend a picture in that section, but we did not know what theater," he said. "We knew he was a movie fan and that he liked gangster pictures especially."

Purvis Telephones.

The telephone buzzer sounded at this juncture, which would scarcely be worth mentioning since there many such interruptions, only this time is was Melvin H. Purvise, chief of the Chicago police. PJurvis it was who gave the signal which opened gunfire on Dillinger.

The tlephone call had to do with the reception for Attorney General Homer S. Cummings when he arrives in Chicago. Cummings had just boarded the train here Sunday night when notified of Dillinger's death.

Hoover was asked whether the successful blow delivered by the young office chief might be called vindication of the Little Bohemia fiasco on April 22, when Dillinger and his henchmen shot their way out of a roadhouse trap thought to have been airtight. Purvis was in charge of the Chicago squad of agents on that occasion.

"He neds no vindication," said Hoover, launching into a bitter tirade against those who criticized Purvis and the entire Department of Justice as a result of that episode.

"Statements of Senators and Congressmen and others to the effect that this failure betrayed gross weaknesses in the department were a display of abysmal ignorance. I wonder if they realize that our agents were the only officers—Federal, State or local—to come even within shooting distance of Dillinger from the time we entered the hunt. No other officers exchanged bullets with him or his gang from that time on."

Never in Washington.

Was Dillinger ever in Washington?

Last March the Capital got a Dillinger scare, common in Illinois and Indiana but very rae in the East, when it was reported the desperado had been seen driving an auto here.

"We are certain he was never in Washington," said Hoover. "From everywhere we received tips on his whereabouts, handreds of them. A few originated right here. They were checked, as were all the others, but they produced nothing whatsoever."

Another false lead, one of the more sensational ones, came in May when Dillinger was reported to have sailed from Halifax, Nova Scotia, aboard the Duchess of York. The Department of Justice had the liner searched. Dillinger, probably within a stone's throw of Chicago's busy loop, doubtless had a good laugh.

Today, the sinister smile wiped forever from his face, the gangster who made Jesse James appear in retrospect like Sir Galahad, awaits burial in an Indianapolis graveyard. Though the Federal Government's war on his gang and all organized crime pushes on, his chapter is finished.

Its closing might be expected to open what is probably the most interesting chapter of all — what methods did the Department of Justice employ in trailing him and causing his fall?

"That story will never be known," says John Edgar Hoover.

World Conference Faces Riddle in Limiting Production.

Europe. Despite its share of the hot, dry weather that has devastated great Western areas, it was said Canada will still have a crop 80,000,000 bushels larger than last year.

Sail to Argentina Parley.

United States experts yesterday were on their way to the Argentine in an effort to bring that country into any international wheat agreement that may be reached. Meantime, reports from that large grain-producing nation indicated Argentine wheat output would be about 50,000,000 bushels under a year ago.

On the basis of yesterday's calculations, the world's wheat carryover will be about 50,000,000 bushels smaller than last year, with stocks in the principal exporting countries, 80,000,000 bushels smaller.

Counting on a United States crop of 484,000,000 bushels, and a domestic carryover of 265,000,000 bushels, Agriculture Department experts are still estimating the total United tSates supply at about 749000,000 bushels. Allowing for domestic consumption of 625,000,000 bushels, next year's carry-over would reach the normal level of 125,000,000 bushels.

The department said changes in prices will depend during the early part of the season on Canadian, European and Russian crop conditions, while later price movements will depend upon reports from the Southern hemisphere.

Kidnap Plot Foiled By Poet's Daughter

Phone Call to Mary Mason Traced by Police.

San Diego, Calif., July 23 (AP).—An apparent attempt to kidnap Miss Mary Mason, 21, daughter of Walt Mason, Nationally known poet, was disclosed today by police.

An unidentified man called the Mason residence in suburban La Jolla Friday night and informed the girl that a Mrs. Stock, an old friend of the family, was seriously ill downtown and asked that Mary Mason come and take her home.

Miss Mason knew that Mrs. Stock had been in Canada for several months and had the call traced. Police said they were on the trail of a man answering the description of the caller.

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation yesterday called for bids to supply a million pounds of fresh or storage butter in one-pound rolls or prints for distribution among the needy unemployed.

The butter will be purchased in the New York and Chicago markets at prices based on the weekly average quotation at the time of purchase.

New England's Good Business Aids New Deal

Masses in Favor of It; Industrial Leaders Are More Worried.

abouts agree that NRA has been a great boon to the textiles. There is the same ferment over codes here as elsewhere. But there appears to be unanimity that the textile codes offset the South's tremendous advantage in low labor costs and put New England textiles back into competition.

For generations the manufacturers of this area have figured down to fractions of a cent of profit on cotton, woolen and worsted goods. What they fear most now is the rising tax bill, local and National. Who is going to pay the bill? I hear that on all sides. The industrialist and the banker rebel at the thought that New England, like the other more prosperous regions, must foot the bill for the poorer States—for the farm belt, for instance.

Banks Too Liquid.

The fear is that high taxes not only will eat up the margin of profit but that the money taken by the tax-gatherer will go elsewhere. This, plus other apprehensions, some vague and undefined, but summed up under the generality of "inflation," has a definitely deterrent effect. Most of the banks are too liquid. They report a redundancy of money to lend, but few borrowers. The best evidence of this state of affairs is the low rate of interest. A Rhode Island banker told me of bidding for a recent municipal issue in Massachusetts, and figuring out that after going to all the trouble of getting it, his bank would have made a profit of exactly $7.

Not only are the leading bankers and business men fearful of the future, but they reflect a new attitude for this country. They are afraid that Washington will crack down on them if they complain openly. They say that if something should happen to take off the lid, to uncork the smouldering hostility to much of the New Deal policy and philosophy, the chorus would be loud and long. But they hold that the time is not ripe—that protest now from industrialists and bankers would only be smothered under a deluge of mass approval for the dispensations of the New Deal.

Workers Like President.

The bulk of the workers, they say, feel that the codes have brought them better pay, better working hours and conditions; the mass sentiment is that the New Deal is a labor government—for the working man, first and foremost. From many sources comes the comment that President Roosevelt's radio talks have captivated countless listeners. He is the first President who has talked intimately to the people in words they can understand.

They not only feel that he is for them, but that he is getting results. The taxpayers, the white-collar workers, are worried about where the money is coming from to meet the debts, National and local, now being piled up, but the mass of workers in New England exhibit no concern about such matters of the future. They are finding employment in the mills. Pay is good. They are spending. A Reserve Bank survey shows only a 7 per cent recession in retail sales this summer over last year. And a year ago there was the inflationary bubble, the rush of the mills and the stores to beat the codes. Hence, bank statisticians figure that retail trade is about what it was a year ago. Automobile dealers are doing a thriving business—on deferred payments. One automobile manufacturer put up his prices a bit. The trade rushed to other makes. He came down quickly. According to local economists, New England buyers are "price conscious."

Coolidge Ideal of President.

"New England is a curious place," said one competent authority. "Big business is stand-pat, ultra-conservative; it is overwhelmingly Republican. Roosevelt would get precious few votes from big business. They didn't care much for Hoover, for that matter. Calvin Coolidge was their idea of a President. They do not like the look of things now. A good many of them think that we are in for reckless inflation. By that they mean budgetary ruin, unbearable taxes, perhaps paper money.

"But at the moment, business is good, or at least it isn't bad. There are too many plants, and we are accustomed to part-time operations. A spurt and then a lay-off. But the cotton textiles are busy. The woolen manufacturers are busy. They make to a price. The wool growers' cooperatives control the price of raw wool. If it goes up the manufacturers put in shoddy, rags, anything. If it goes down the quality goes up. The worsteds are closed down. The cost of worsteds is out of line. The shoe people also make to a price. They sell for, say, $1.48 a pair to retailers who sell for $2. If hides go up they use cheaper materials, like the woolen manufacturers. But they are doing well just now on cheap goods, that is, goods made to sell at low cost. Price competition is hot."

Trend to Cheapness Wide.

From a number of sources, I heard that New England was turning to cheap goods. Some of the elders deplore it—think it is an evil departure from old traditions of fine products and sound workmanship. One large manufacturer told me of putting out a cheaper product last year to meet the sharp competition. He said he could not make enough of the cheap substitute to fill the orders. But he remarked, sadly, that it went against his grain to lower old standards—and besides there was not much money in it.

The makers of fine jewelry complain that the cheap imitations have driven them out. There are many tales of chiselers—including two enterprising New Yorkers who invaded Connecticut with a truckload of sewing and cutting machines, hired girls as apprentices for 50 cents a week and manufactured shirts. As soon as the apprentice period was over, or irate competitors moved to crack down, the invaders would stow their portable machines in the trucks and steal away like the Arabs to another community, to work the same racket all over again.

New England has had plenty of labor trouble, but none as yet of formidable proportions. The shoe manufacturers are nervous about communist agitators in the shoe towns. But in general labor appears to be less restive than in many other sections.

Demands Toned Down.

"When NRA first came along," said one business leader, "labor seemed to think it was an invitation to take over industry. But since then they have toned down and are satisfied to get back what they lost in wage cuts."

The railroads are far from thriving. Boston & Maine is said to be about breaking even. The New Haven is solvent by grace of the RFC at Washington. Neither earns enough on the present volume of traffic to support capitalization, yet neither is as overcapitalized as some of the boom-manipulated roads. One railroad official explains that the trucks have taken away unprofitable short-haul business, but have also cut in on profitable long hauls.

As for New Deal monetary policy, the bankers and business men who follow it at all, shake their heads. At mention of Prof. Warren, they snicker. For some reason or other, they think the professor is funny—even though they think his ideas are fatal. I have heard scarcely any fault-finding with the professoriat, generally. Gen. Johnson is admired for his vigor, and forgiven all sins evidently because of the NRA benefits to the textiles. Old-line conservatives hold up their hands in horror at Prof. Tugwell's ideas, and scoff at Felix Frankfurter's prolific proteges.

Little Alarm Felt.

But "on the whole" there is not much current discussion of or alarm about the brain trust. Mr. Roosevelt is credited with the best of intentions—and with too much political flexibility, by the conservatives. Yet there is no such sense of impending disaster as one gathers in downtown New York, for example.

I have asked repeatedly what New Englanders think about the war debts, and after a first look of surprise at mention of the dead, the invariable reply comes back that nobody talks about them. They have been written off, so most of the bankers say. They add that they think if Washington could get even a small cash settlement everybody in this region would be more than satisfied.

Altogether the visitor to New England is bound to be impressed by the industrial activity, the signs of fair if not booming business, the general look of returning prosperity. Boston is developing evidences of a revival of residential building. If it were not for the grave fears of the future, to be found among the upper bracket citizenry, all would seem well.

Yankee Spirit Breaking.

Yet New England is passing through a transitional period. It is not merely the cheap goods. The New England spirit is changing. The old, simple virtues seem to be dying out with the old order. The aging survivors of a harder, sterner day see the breakdown of a long-established system. Some of them are trying to become readjusted, while deploring the passing of what they profoundly believe was a better order. It has been called by hard names—industrial bourbonism, even slavery. Others dig in, refuse to surrender, predict a day of retribution. But the philosophizing is swamped in the flush of current events, the rush of business activity of the moment.

The New Deal may be riding to a terrific fall, as the older heads seem to think, but it is riding high in New England just now.

John Wasn't Bad All Through, Says Dillinger's Aged Father

Son Died Way He Wanted To, He Asserts; Goes to Claim Body.

Mooresville, Ind., July 23 (AP).—A weary old man, heart sick over his son's death, climbed into E. F. Harvey's hearse today for a 200-mile trip to Chicago.

He was John Dillinger, sr., and he was going after the body of his boy, called by some folks "John, the killer." But as he left on his sad jonrney, he said: "You know, I can't think John was bad all the way through."

As soon as he can the father will claim the body and bring it back for burial. He hopes to have the services next Wednesday and bury his son beside the boy's mother in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis.

The 70-year-old father of the desperatdo who fell under the fire of Federal agents' guns in Chicago last night has been ill. There wasn't much rest for the father last night after word came that his boy was dead.

A physician advised that he remain here and let friends go to Chicago, but the father couldn't have it that way.

The elder Dillinger said he "suspected" his son died as he wanted to die.

"He never told me so," said the father, "but they laid so many things on him that I guess he rather would have been shot down than arrested again.

"The last time I saw Johnnie was April 8. I haven't heard from him for weeks but I have been worrying about him ag ood deal lately. I thought this had to come and I have been expecting it any tmie.

There were many expressions of sympathy for the Dillinger family.

William Lyons, president of the Mooresville Town Board, said:

"The Dilinger family is highly respected here and Johnny was well liked until he went wrong. Mooresville has deep sympathy for the family but this should not be undestood as condoning any of Johnny's acts.'

R. O. Aldrich, town marshal, was greatly relieved. He has had no great part in the search for the desperado but he has been harassed by the frequent reports of Dillinger's return to visit the home folks.

Stock Raisers Cut Sales.

Kansas City, Mo., July 23 (U.P.).—Stock raisers heeded the pleas of commission men today and only about 12,000 head reached the yards instead of the expected run of 35,000.

Pacific Coast Strikers Vote On Mediation

Shipping Gains at Frisco; General Walkout Plan Dropped at Portland.

San Francisco, July 23 (AP).—Under the guiding hand of the Government's Mediation Board, 12,000 striking Pacific Coast Longshoremen ballotted today on whether to submit their troubles to arbitration and go back to work. A favorable vote was widely forecast.

Vestiges of business paralysis engendered by the long strkie and the unprecedented mass walkout of San Francisco Bay District Labor in sympathy with the Longshoremen and other marine workers beprogressed. Portland labor leaders dropped plans for a sympathetic mass walkout there, pending outcome of the ballotting.

Shipping operations began to approach their normal status. The working of cargo by non-union men continued at Seattle, Portland and San Francisco.

Scattered Violence Continues.

Scattered violence and acts of sabotage continued, some of these in connection with the continuing strike of union carmen of the Market Street Railway here.

One man was injured and four other persons reported subjected to danger when greased rails caused the wrecking of a trolley car at the foot of Polk street as the Market street lines gave curtailed service with "company union" employes. An attempt was made to fire a conductor's home. A shot was fired through the window of a resaurant patronized by carmen. A few instances of beating and threats were reported.

About 700 National Guardsmen remaining on duty on the State-owned San Francisco water front were ordered withdrawn tonight or tomorrow.

Trops Presence Protested.

The presence of guardsmen near the hall of the International Longshoremen's Association during the voting here was protested to President Roosevelt's mediation board by officials of the union. Longshoremen's leaders said militiamen rushed to the spot when 3,000 union men apepared to cast their ballots.

If the longshoremen vote for arbitration at the hands of the President's board they will have yielded on an important point on which they previously had refused to budge.

This point is control of the hiring agencies through which the men are sent to jobs. Formerly the halls were controlled by the employers. This issue, surrounded by a complication of other lesser problems, has been the principal one in the entire trouble, beginning May 9.

Train Hits Stalled Truck; 5 Injured assisted in rescue work, and two unidentified women passengers, who were given fire aid for slight injuries to their legs, and removed from the scene in private automobiles.

Unable to take his heavy truck, in which he was carrying rock and garvel, across the Landover Bridge, over the right-of-way, Samuel Lacy, colored, of the 800 block of Q street southeast, the driver, attempted to get it across the tracks.

Truck Stalled on Tracks.

Using logs, he turned on his engine, and then the heavy vehicle stalled in the path of the train. Eugene Black, colored, of No. 73 M street southeast, who drove a truck following Black's, heard the approaching flyer, and rushed to the bridge in an attempt to flag it. As the train bore down on him, Lacy jumped. The crash split the truck in two, and fragments of it were carried 200 yards down the tracks by the train.

The front car then jumped the track and half overturned on the sandy bank. The severed electric wires caused flames to spring up in a dozen places in both cars as passengers fought to escape.

Deed and several others shattered windows, and the passengers crawled to safety.

Fire Burns Half Hour.

The Bladensburg rescue squad and fire department reached the scene shortly after the wreck. They extinguished the fire in about half an hour.

Passengers were sent back to Annapolis Junction on a special train until the right-of-way could be cleared. Trains were in operation again several hours after the accident.

"I was in the second car, and something made me look up," said Reed after the crash. "I saw something on the tracks ahead of us, and then there was a crash.

"Flames leaped from the floor, and seemed to come from all directions. I fought my way out by smashing a dindow, and then helped the others."

After the accident Lacy was held by Prince Georges County police for investigation.

Death by Thirst Near For Oklahoma Cattle

Oklahoma City, July 23 (AP).—Only a two weeks' supply of water remains between 100,000 western Oklahoma cattle and death, E. J Jeffrey, special drought investigator, reported to the FERA administration.

FERA officials here said the only apparent way to save many cattle would be to ship them to points where water could be obtained. Money is lacking to do this.

Germans Face Soap Rationing As During War

New Commission Given Control Over Raw Materials.

Berlin, July 23 (AP).—Fresh indications that Germany is being forced into absolute rationing of raw materials on a basis second only to the World War period came today with the announcement that a special commission will "control" the available supply of vegetable oils and animal fats and will regulate the production of soap.

Practically every phase of German industrial life now is under organized restrictions that are being gradually tightened to strangulating pressure as imports of needed raw materials are being curtailed.

The latest "control board" will be of especial importance, it is anticipated, since oils and fats constitute the present outstanding problem of the third Reich when it comes to talk of "self sufficiency" against the remainder of the world.

Oil seeds can not be grown freely in Germany, and the supply of animal fat is inadequate.

Hoarding of soap by the public now is visualized unless the present restrictions on the import of fats are relieved since the German public has definite memories of the crude mixtures offered as soap during the war.

Johann von Leers, Nazi academic leader, suggested that all "efficiency" patents now held in reserve by industrialists be seized and exploited in the interests of economic independence.

"These patents are now kept in sealed safes, unused because firms that quickly bought them and repressed them are fearful of having to scrap existing production methods," he said.

In the matter of food, agricultural experts are finding increasing evidence that Germany will have sufficient meat and bread grains for the coming winter, but perhaps will face a serious shortage of seed and grains for animals.

Foreign exchange in considerable amounts may have to be employed to compensate for the ravages of dry weather, it was pointed out.

D. C. Water Shortage Danger Discounted Despite Dearth of Rainfall This Month

Although this July has been the driest in 62 years, according to Weather Bureau figures, there is no danger of a water shortage in Washington. D. W. Holton, superintendent of the water division of the Engineer Department, considers the drought no worse than the prolonged spell suffered here two years ago, in spite of the fact that the first 22 days of the month chalked up only .28 of an inch rainfall, compared with the average normal figure of 4.71 inches.

Even if the month should continue rainless, the District water facilities are capable of serving the community's needs. One hundred and seventy-five million gallons a day or more is the capacity of the District reservoirs, and the largest amount used so far is about 120,000,000, the average for Thursday and Friday of last week.

The normal consumption for July is between 80,000,000 and 90,000,000 gallons a day.

Almost the entire amount is used in the District, although Arlington County and a number of suburban Maryland communities are being supplied.

The water, which comes from nearby hills, runs through about 870 miles of conduits into a number of small reservoirs located around the District, most of which are closed to the air. Before it reaches the tap it is purified with chlorine and cleared with alum.

Local showers in surrounding territory have helped to keep the supply from dangerous depletion.

The last month in which Washington experienced normal rainfall was May, with 3.84 inches, slightly above the average of 3.7. June was another unusually dry month, when only 2.87 inches of rain fell as contrasted with the normal figure of 4.13.

The driest July suffered by Washington previously was in 1872, when .82 of an inch fell during the whole month.

Youths Remanded In Car Theft Case

Fredericksburg, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Two New York youths recently arrested here driving a stolen car were ordered held for investigation by the October grand jury in Richmond at a hearing before United States Commissioner E. E. Fisher today at Falmouth, Va.

The two, Leonard Shultz, 20, and Harry Truetage, 19, were released on $1,000 bond. They were caught here Thursday when local police responded to the call of a Stafford County filling station proprietor, who accused them of leaving without paying for gasoline purchased.

Richmond Employment Increases 15% in Year

Richmond, July 23 (AP).—The city employment bureau today reported that the general employment situation here is from 15 to 20 per cent better than it was a year ago.

Not only is the bureau receiving fewer applications, but it is able to secure more jobs for those who apply, it was stated, public works projects have practically absorbed the local supply of carpenters.

12 Deaths in Maryland Auto Crashes Prompt Safety Appeal

Baltimore, July 23 (Spl.).—Deaths of 12 persons in Maryland from auto accidents during the past week-end brought an appeal today from C. M. Falconer, president of the Automobile Club of Maryland, for motorists to use more care while operating cars.

"I deplore these many accidents," Mr. Falconer said. "There are two main causes of accidents, I believe, and one of them is inattention on the part of the driver.

"The other is excessives speed. But speed by itself isn't the main thing. Inattention is worse. I saw this morning, for instance, that an accident happened when a driver leaned over to look at his instrument board.

"Persons riding in a car should make it a rule not to distract the driver from his job. A man can't do two things at the same time and do both well. These things should be called to the attention of all who drive cars."

The fatalities occurred in all sections of the State. Mrs. Bertha D. Dicken, 28, was found dead, early today, near her father's filling station, about 10 miles East of Cumberland and was believed to be the victim of a hit-run driver.

A colored woman was killed in St. Marys County, two men burned to death in a crash near Conowingo, several persons were killed in Baltimore, and crashes in other parts of the State accounted for the other deaths.

Mystery in Death Of Woman on Road

Cumberland, Md., July 23 (Spl.). Authorities have been unable to decide just how Mrs. Bertha Beck Dicken, 28, whose body was found on the Baltimore turnpike, near the service station of her father, Louis H. Beck, sr., one mile from the city, met her death.

Ralph Harris, who lives nearby, discovered the body yesterday.

It is thought she was struck by an unknown motorist. There was evidence that a machine had skidded to avoid hitting the woman. Her skull was fractured and she was cut and bruised about the head and body. Her shoes were torn from her feet. Her pocketbook, containing a sum of money, was found nearby. Mrs. Dicken had been in the city earlier in the evening.

She was twice married and besides her father she is survived by her widower, James M. Dicken, from whom she had been estranged, and two children. She also leaves three brothers and seven sisters.

Auto Hits Bridge Rail; Two Severely Injured

Richmond, July 23 (AP).—Ralph Berlin, 25, of Norfolk, suffered a compound fracture of the jaw and possibly a fractured skull, and Harold Hickman, 25, of Albany, N. Y., broke his right arm and may have a fractured skull as a result of an automobile accident early this morning.

The car, reported to have been driven by Hickman, struck the side of the boulevard bridge across James River.

Shenandoah Fair Dates Announced

New Market, Va., July 23 (Spl.). Officers of the Shenandoah County Fair Association announce September 11, 12, 13 and 14 as the dates upon which this year's fair will be held.

Arrangements are being made for a horse racing program. Directors of the association anticipate a large attendance.

Crisfield, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Mrs. Emma Cordelia Chase, 80, who died at Ocean City Saturday, was buried here today.

She is survived by one son, Wilfred Lee Chase, of Coxsackie, N. Y.; two grandchildren, Mrs. George V. Robbins, of New York City, and Mrs. Roy G. Cuno, of Langley Field, Va.; one great-grandchild, Miss Rosemary Robbins, of New York City; a sister, Mrs. G. Solomon Tull, of Crisfield, and a nephew, Ernest Byrd, of Princess Anne.

Drought Ruins Oklahoma Vote Interest Today

"Murrayism" Issue Gone From Democratic Run-Off.

Oklahoma City, July 23 (AP).—Providing a listless aftermath to the main political news, Oklahoma's run-off primary will be presented tomorrow to an electorate more interested in when it's going to rain.

The selection of Representative E. W. Marland as the Democratic nominess for Governor following the first primary and the disappearance of the four-year-old "Murrayism" issue robs the second election of much of its usual zest this year.

Only a fraction of the 513,000 voters who balloted July 3 are expected to go back to vote on the two high men in races where no clear majority was returned in the first balloting.

Marland, the New Deal candidate, won the nomination after Tom Anglin, Gov. William H. Murray's indorsee, had withdrawn from the second-place runoff position. Subsequently, "Alfalfa Bill" himself announced he was washing his hands of party affairs for the rest of his term.

Five Congressional incumbents, all Democrats, face runoff opposition. They are Representatives Will Rogers, Tom McKeown, J. V. McClintic, Wilburn Cartwright and Jed Johnson. Representative Wesley Disney was nominated in the first primary and Representative F. B. Swank was defeated, losing to Josh Lee, a University of Oklahoma professor, who became the nominee by a clear majority.

In the two districts, where the incumbents are not running again, close results are expected. Phil K. Oldham, of Muskogee, faces Jack Nichols, of Eufaula, in the Second District, where Representative W. W. Hastings, Democrat, retired, and the Democratic nomination in the Eighth (northwest) District lies between J. M. Gentry, of Enid, and Phil Ferguson, Woodward County rancher.

Anglers' Paradise Raided, Plea for NRA Aid Planned

Ocean City, Md., July 23 (Spl.). Veteran fishing guides are considering an appeal to the NRA for help in fixing some type of fishing code between anglers and boats of the deep sea fishing fleets that operate off the Maryland coast.

It's the fault of an unknown mackerel schooner, whose captain raided several coastwise "wrecks" and chummed them dry of weakfish, say Ocean City guides.

Capt. Levin J. Bunting glimpsed the mackerel schooner shortly after it had raided an old "wreck" on Fenwick Shoals, 12 miles northeast of this resort, long a spot of delight for anglers seeking weakfish. According to Bunting the unknown boat chummed the weakfish from the wreck and then caught around 10 tons of the fish with purse nets, leaving the spot bare of any sport hook-and-line fishermen might enjoy.

Examination of other coastwise "wrecks" where fish have ordinarily abounded has revealed traces of wholesale invasion by the mackerel fleet crews, local guides relate.

Film Champions for June—Col. Jas. J. Lake Made Officer of New Burlesk Wheel

By Nelson B. Bell.

The survey of key city box-offices throughout the country, conducted monthly by the Motion Picture Herald, established seven pictures as the June champions. The seven pictures, however, as I believe was the case last month, covered only four ratings, three having been tied for second place and two for fourth. First and third places were undisputed.

It will come as a surprise to many, no doubt, that topping the list of June box-office winners was "Many Happy Returns," that utterly nonsensical comedy with music, in which the principal roles were played by Gracie Allen and George Burns, George Barbier, Joan Marsh, Ray Milland, Stanley Fields and Guy Lombardo—with his orchestra. Our verdict on this picture was that the degree of enjoyment to be derived from it would be contingent wholly upon the individual's personal enthusiasm for Burns & Allen and fondness of the Lombardo brand of legato and lilting music. Mass, as well as individual, enthusiasm must run pretty high over the country in favor of this combination.

Three Tied for Second.

The three films tied for second place were "The Thin Man," which just completed a record, hot-weather run at the Palace; "Little Miss Marker," with Shirley Temple and Adolphe Menjou, and Universal's "Little Man What Now?" costarring Margaret Sullavan and Douglass Montgomery.

The production dropping into the uncontested third notch was Marion Davies and Gary Cooper's latest, "Operator 13." The two fourths were Universal's "Glamour" and Warner Brothers' "Smarty." These featured, respectively, Constance Cummings and Paul Lukas and Warren William and Joan Blondell.

This list covers a wide range of subject matter, from sheerest nonsense to almost tragic drama, and embraces further evidence that mass preference still favors some aspects of screen entertainment upon which those engaged in the cleanup drive against the cinema frown.

The June score, by producing companies, it may be noted, was two champions for Paramount, two for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, two for Universal and one for Warners.

Mention of "Little Miss Marker" serves as a reminder that her latest production for Fox, "Baby, Take a Bow," is to be screened for the dramatic desks this morning at 11, in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange, New Jersey avenue at K street.

Heretofore, when we have gazed upon the screen image of this prodigious young lady, we have been looking merely at a $150-per-week youngster who seemed to "have something."

This morning we will be intently watching a tiny $1,000-per-week actress, who very decidedly "has something," which, thanks to the business sagacity of her banker-father, now includes a big-time salary, contracted for a seven-year period. The $150 per week that Shirley used to receive now goes to her mother for teaching her her lines and coaching her on the set.

To Appear in Famous Barrie Play

A new portrait study, and a slightly bizarre one, of that vibrant young actress, Katharine Hepburn, who is scheduled to be starred as Lady Babbie in a new RKO-Radio film version of Sir James Matthew Barrie's celebrated play, "The Little Minister." It was in this role, it will be recalled, that Maude Adams achieved one of her most substantial successes, back in what are quaintly referred to as "those gay '90s."

Jimmy Lake Is Elected.

That Chesterfield of burlesque and Beau Brummel of the sports arenas, Col. James J. Lake, on Tuesday, July 10, was elected vice president of the newly formed Independent Burlesk Association, organized with an assured circuit of 12 theaters now and a probable 20 by the time the Gayety season opens on September 2.

JAMES J. LAKE.

The organization meeting was held in the Adelphia Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa., in fulfillment of Isadore Hirst's promise that the burlesque branch of show business would be organized to take advantage of the opportunities for expansion which he believes to be available to it during the ensuing season.

In step with the tendency of the times, the first thing that will be done will be to clean up the burleycue form of entertainment. Filthy dialogue will be strictly banned and the feminine "display artistes" will be limited to two to a company.

This is a matter in which the good Col. Lake will find himself supported by the entire circuit, his policy at the Gayety having been to deny admittance to patrons under the age of 16, to eliminate indecency and keep his productions on a basis of talent and legitimate entertainment values.

The new Independent Burlesk Association elected Jimmy Lake to the vice presidency and general advisorship in recognition of his fine Washington record as impresario of the Gayety Theater, the only citadel of burlesque the Capital has known since Jack Garrison long ago folded up his Mutual establishment down on the Avenue near Ninth—now razed.

The shows to be produced under the strict supervision of the Messrs. Hirst and Lake will carry 16 chorus girls and 10 to 12 principals, exclusive of novelty acts and specialty artists. It is the avowed purpose of the new organization, so Jimmy tells me, to bring back to the stage as many of the former stars of the Columbia "wheel" as possible. There were a lot of clever people in that crew.

Each theater in the circuit will produce a show, subect to the Hirst-Lake approval, and percentage bookings will not be made. Each house will pay the salaries of the company it plays each week and a $15 booking fee will be paid the association for the upkeep of its offices.

Congratulations, Colonel, and good luck. And, by the way, save me one down front on the aisle for the opening.

It will bear repetition that the Roadside Theater, 6 miles beyond Bethesda, out the Rockville pike at Halpine, Md., has met with such overwhelming success with its production of "Murder in the Red Barn" that this ancient English melodrama will be continued through Wednesday night of this week. This "barn" theater group in the near future will produce a manuscript play, never before done on any stage. We have mentioned this here before and will go into a little more detail concerning it very soon.

Auditions Wednesday Night.

Local entertainers who wish to be considered for parts in the second annual Loew's Fox Theater "All-Washington Revue" should present themselves at the Auditorium of the National Press Club, on the thirteenth floor of the National Press Building, Fourteenth and F streets, Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

On that evening, Gene Ford, who will have the production of the show in charge, will begin the auditions that will determine those whose talents seem to entitle them to a place in the revue. The auditions are scheduled to begin promptly at 8 o'clock. In order that there may be no delay in getting this huge task under way, it is urged that applicants be present not later than 7:30.

It is emphasized that one need not be a native-born Washingtonian to be eligible for a place in the "All-Washington Revue." The mere fact of residence here now is sufficient qualification—that is, in addition to the minor matter of talent!

Some stress also is placed upon the fact that every participant in the revue will be paid a salary for the week of its presentation at the Fox, beginning Friday, August 10.

Anyone who can dance, sing, whistle, play any musical instrument, juggle, do acrobatics or anything else deemed adequate to divert an audience of 3,400 persons at every performance, should be at the National Press Club auditorium Wednesday night at 7:30.

And don't say I didn't tell you.

Speaking of the Fox, Alex Morrison, the trick golf shot artist and authority on the game, who is making a week of personal appearances on the Fox stage, demonstrated to some of the boys yesterday that he plays just as good a game as he talks. Out at the Manor Club yesterday morning he shot a 38 for the first nine holes, two over par. He was unable to run out the full 18 because he had to hurry back to the theater for a performance. In the foursome that went around were Charlie Schoneman, M.-G.-M. Leo's pal, Norman Pyle, and Papa Lou Brown, head of the loewcal Loew publicity staff.

"As You Don't Like It."

After ten days of preliminary activity had led to the announcement of an open air performance of Shakespeare's "As You Like It," in a projected sylvan theater in Glen Echo Park, sudden developments caused Leonard B. Schloss, vice president and general manager of the park, to abandon the undertaking for at least another year.

Among the insurmountable difficulties were included the high cost of landscaping the theater—which entailed the sacrifice of some of the finest old trees in the park—the doubtful possibilities of wiring sufficient direct current into the park to provide adequate stage illumination and inability to secure the services of Frances Starr, former Belasco star, who in private life is Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson of Washington, to serve in the capacity of adviser on staging and lighting.

Miss Starr's contract to appear in the stage production of "Lady Jane," a London hit in which Marie Tempest has scored, specifically provides that her professional services shall be rigidly restricted to this new play, to be produced by Arthur Hopkins in association with Arch Selwyn.

Flora and Fauna Note.

Yesterday afternoon when I struck Arthur out in the sun—that would be Arthur Mometer—it only registered 102 degrees, fairenough, as against Saturday's 106, which was practically freezing by comparison.

But what wore me down was having to fill the bird bath four times. Those blackbirds are no fools, but they certainly carry heavy displacements!

Or don't you care about the birds and the bees and flowers?

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 22.—Mitzi Green, who was the child wonder of three seasons ago, is to do her first grown-up lady role. And whether she will again offer her impersonations of famous people is a question, but she may do so. The picture is "Transatlantic Merry Go-Round," which is being produced by Edward Small for United Artists, with Jack Benny, Nancy Carroll, Sid Silvers, Gene Raymond, Sidney Blackmer and others in the cast.

MITZI GREEN.

Miss Green just missed her redebut about six months ago, when "Finishing School" was being talked of for production. She didn't like the role in the picture, and so decided to go on a personal appearance tour instead. She was very popular in the early talkie period. Mitzi is now 5 feet 4 inches in height, and weighs 115 pounds.

America Or England?

If he can't get a job in Hollywood, then D. W. Griffith will have one in England. What curious irony for the man who pioneered motion pictures! Apparently no company has been willing to take a chance on his come-back at the proper stipend, but Britain still regards him highly, and arrangements were recently made with him by Herbert Wilcox which will probably lead to his directing "Old Curiosity Shop," one of the numerous Dickens enterprises.

It is understood that Joseph Schenck also figured in the negotiations. The last company for which Griffith worked out here was United Artists, when he made "Abraham Lincoln." After that came "The Struggle," which was a sad effort, in view of the former glories of Griffith.

• • • •

Good Part Predominates.

Even if he is occasionally a bad boy, Jack Oakie is one of the best-loved and ablest chaps in the movies. Consequently Paramount has taken up his contract, and he will continue right on with that studio. There were rumors in circulation that he might not stay on there, but this proves that Jack has the fundamental qualities that tell. He will next appear in "College Rhythm" with Joe Penner and Lanny Ross.

• • • •

Heroes Selected.

The full complement of male leads have now been chosen for "Just Out of College." Nick Foran goes into the cast with Franchot Tone, Rose Alexander and Merwin Light. Foran was borrowed from Fox by Warner Brothers. He will sing a number or two in the production. Foran scored in "Stand Up and Cheer."

Another addition to the cast is John Eldredge, whose role will also be quite consequential. The ladies in the cast are portrayed by Jean Muir and Margaret Lindsay.

• • • •

Helen Vinson With Baxter.

Helen Vinson, whose future seems fairly progressive since "The Power and the Glory" and "The Life of Vergie Winters," has been assigned to "Broadway Bill," the Frank Capra picture. Myrna Loy is in the top spot in the film, but Miss Vinson will be in many scenes with Warner Baxter, even though the picture is about half completed. The company lately has been shooting additional race-track scenes at the Warner ranch.

• • • •

May Replace Arlen.

It will probably be Henry Wilcoxon who will be seen in "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" in the place of Richard Arlen, who drops out of that cast to go into "Ready for Love." There are a quartet of leads in the "Bengal Lancer" feature, the other three being Gary Cooper, Cary Grant and Sir Guy Standing. Frances Drake is being considered for the feminine lead, along with possibly Katherine DeMille.

• • • •

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Set construction has started for "Babes in Toyland," which will probably start shooting before the first of the month.

"Shoe the Wild Mare" is still on the production schedule at Paramount, despite reports that it was to be withdrawn on account of new censorship rules. Edward G. Robinson is slated for the lead, with the start scheduled for August 20.

A two-reel version of "The Song of the Flame" is being made at the Brooklyn Vitaphone studio, and Bernice Clare, seen in the feature-length production made in Hollywood, heads the cast with Harold Murray.

Virginia Party Groups to Draw Battle Lines

By C. B. Carr.

Richmond, July 23.—Politics are expected to gather increased momentum this week with the meeting of the Young Democrats at Lynchburg Friday and Saturday and the Republican executives and State committees at Roanoke Saturday.

Politics have been dull so far. There has been no statement of policy by the Republicans and the Democrats, although having a full slate of candidates for Congress, have made but a few scattered statements on National problems.

Glass Will Speak.

Carter Glass is scheduled to address the Young Democrats. Much interest is being manifested in what he may have to say in view of the fact that while the Roosevelt Administration has pushed forward its New Deal policies, Mr. Glass has maintained consistently his stand, classed by many as representing the Old Deal. It is generally believed he will make a full and frank discussion of problems.

Mr. Glass is not up for reelection, but his junior colleague, Harry Flood Byrd, of Winchester, is standing for reelection for a full term. Mr. Byrd was elected for a 1-year term last fall to fill out the vacancy caused by the resignation of Claude Swanson, who became Secretary of the Navy.

The Democrats have all Representatives up for reelection in the nine districts. The Congressional race, like that for the Senate, has been quiet except for a statement by Andrew Jackson Montague, Third District, criticizing opponents of "New Deal" principles, and the Ninth District, where John W. Flannagan, Democrat, is opposed by a Republican and an Independent.

Montague Issues Statement.

Mr. Montague's statement voicing opposition to "New Deal" critics was made shortly after Senator Byrd denounced proposed amendments to the agricultural adjustment administration act on the grounds it would make Secretary of Agriculture Wallace a "Hitler of Agriculture." Montague's attack was regarded in some quarters as a retort to Senator Byrd, who is the recognized head of the Virginia Democratic machine.

Also of interest is the expected declaration of the Republican State central committee. According to H. B. McCormac, Winchester, State chairman, and Fred W. McWane, Lynchburg, secretary, the plans and policies of the Republicans for the November election will be discussed. It has been learned from reliable quarters that the Republicans plan a real battle for the Congressional chairs in at least six districts, with probable lesser battles in the remaining three. The Republicans also will consider the matter of a State convention this year and the place, if it is to be held.

Kent Farmers Plan Outing

1,500 or More Expected at Bureau's Annual Affair.

Tolchester, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Fifteen hundred farmers and their families are expected here August 7, when the annual outing and meeting of the Kent County Farm Bureau will be addressed by M. D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation; Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service, and Charles E. Wise, secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau.

Secretary James D. Davis, jr., of the county unit, is in charge of arrangements. He will submit his annual report, as will President E. Thomas Massey of the Kent bureau. A program of 4-H Club sports for boys and girls has been arranged.

Meanwhile Secretary Lincoln and J. F. Porter, secretary of the Tennessee Farm Bureau Federation, will address other similar meetings in the Maryland counties during the summer. The Talbot County meeting will be held at Bruffs Island July 24 and the Worcester County meeting at Snow Hill.

On July 25 the Caroline and Montgomery County meetings will be held and the following day a picnic for four southern Maryland counties will be held at Chapel Point. The Carroll County meeting will be held in the State armory at Westminster July 27 and the following day the Howard County picnic will be held at Brendels Manor Park. Cecil County will hold its meeting August 8.

Bank-Plot Trial Is Begun in Elkins

Elkins, W. Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Charged with conspiracy to misappropriate funds of the Traders National Bank, at Buckhannon, now defunct, William Post, president; his wife, Annie Hurst Post, and son, John H. Post; Sanford Graham, cashier, and John C. McWhorter, former circuit court judge; Charles E. Munson, sr., and O. G. Young, directors, today went on trial in Federal district court here, following declaration of a mistrial last week because of disqualification of a juror after the trial had started.

The Government recites 97 alleged accumulative overt acts by the defendants, starting in 1923 and continuing until the bank closed its doors October 15, 1931. Post is a former State senator.

Court Ratifies Central Trust 6% Dividend

Frederick Judge's Action Assures $646,352,000 Cash Payment.

Frederick, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Chief Judge Hammond Urner today ratified the report of John J. Ghinger, State bank examiner and receiver for the Central Trust Co., filed in the Circuit Court here July 7, which calls for a dividend of 6 per cent to all depositors and creditors of the trust company and its 11 branch banks. Preparation of the dividend checks will begin at once.

Depositors who objected to the reorganization will receive in addition to the initial 6 per cent dividend 16 per cent of the cash value of their deposits.

The 6 per cent dividend will aggregate about $646,352,000 to about 80,000 depositors. The payments will be in the form of checks to depositors in all communities except the five in which the new banks are to be set up. In these five, Frederick, Middletown, Walkersville, Sykesville and Poolesville, the payments will be in the form of deposits, subject to checking, in the new banks. All payments of $5 and under, however, will be made outright, regardless of where the claimants reside. Following payment of the first dividend, which with other payments made and to be made amounts to $927,122.40, the receiver will retain the amount necessary to pay the balances to dissenting depositors and other court-approved balances, turning over the remainder to the liquidating agency for reorganization. This agency, the Peoples Liquidating Corporation, is to receive $99,279.57, the balance in the receivers' hands.

Plans for reorganization are going ahead, one of the next steps being the election of officers of the Western Maryland Trust Co. in this city and of the four independent State banks at Middletown, Walkersville, Sykesville and Poolesville. Directors of the banks were chosen some days ago.

Danville Promised School-Site Funds

Danville, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—The Danville school board today was assured of enough money to grade the site and playground for a new colored school, although no provision has yet been made for building it.

The FERA has approved a $14,000 project for the grading. Today options amounting to $6,000 were closed assuring the property for school purposes.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd wrote to the board that Danville's PWA application for a loan of $332,189 for a power plant has not been acted on. Secretary Ickes, Byrd wrote, is bearing in mind Virginia's non-Federal projects but at present the PWA is out of money and can get more only by action of the President or the sale of bonds to the RFC.

18 Leave Culpeper For V. P. I. Course

Culpeper, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Eighteen members of the 4-H Clubs of Culpeper County, representing six schools, left today for Blacksburg to take part in the State short course at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

They are chaperoned by Miss Eunice Maddox, in charge of the girls, and Prof. Howard H. Newlon.

County Agent J. C. Eller, with a group of all-star members, including Miss Anne Stout, Miss Ruby Wiseman, Robert Grimm and William Smith, jr., are already at the institute.

Fruit Brandies Firm Gets Virginia Permit

Richmond, July 23 (AP).—The State corporation commission today issued a charter to the Blue Ridge Distilleries, Inc., of Front Royal, for the manufacture of fruit brandies at that place. Beverly F. Brown heads the corporation.

Brown said his company expected to start production in the fall.

Trees He Planted Die Soon After Pastor's Death

Big Laurel, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—People are wondering about the three Irish junipers on Carter Dean's yard in Wise. About 25 years ago the Rev. Emmett Arthur Swindall planted the trees there.

The superstitious said: "Preacher, when they grow large enough to shade your grave you will surely die." The minister only smiled and tended his bushes. They grew into fine trees. One of the three was said to be the largest Irish juniper in southwest Virginia, if not in the State. The Rev. Mr. Swindall sold the place and moved away. The trees grew on—large enough to shade several graves. Then last spring the Rev. Mr. Swindall was suddenly stricken with a strange disease and died within a few days.

A few days later the foliage on the junipers began to turn brown and fall off. And today all three of them are dead.

Church School Officers Named

Six From Roanoke Will Aid in Program of Lutherans.

Roanoke, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Dr. J. Luther Sieber, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church here, will serve as dean of the Lutheran Church conference and training school at Massanetta Springs July 30 to August 5.

Other administrative officers will be the Rev. Homer Anderson, superintendent of the Virginia Synod; the Rev. M. L. Minnick, of Harrisonburg, secretary; E. L. Keiser, of Waynesboro, registrar, and A. S. Craft, of Roanoke, director of recreation.

Others from Roanoke on the program are Miss Marguerite Bowers, who will serve as resident nurse; Judge J. Lindsey Almond, jr., who will be a speaker; Miss Mary Markley, an instructor, and the Rev. H. Edgar Knies, pastor of the Virginia Heights Lutheran Church, who will direct the musical program.

Dr. Frank Carroll Longaker, a professor at Roanoke College, Salem, also will be an instructor.

Bame Not Placed In Auto-Death Quiz

J. Adrian Dovel Killed in Virginia Crash.

Luray, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Page County officers who today held an inquest over J. Adrian Dovel, who was instantly killed near here last night in an automobile accident, failed to place the blame for the tragedy.

The car driven by Dovel collided with a CCC truck from Wolf Camp, in the Blue Ridge. Dovel died from scalp wounds. His companions, Ray Shenk, of Luray, and Marvin Comer, of Shenandoah, are suffering from internal injuries.

Virgil Comer, another occupant of the car, also was injured. The dead man is a son of Benjamin Dovel, who lives 18 miles south of Luray.

Doctor Describes Wounds at Trial

Wytheville, Va., July 23 (AP).—The trial of Henry F. Bausell, 56, Lebanon newspaper publisher, charged with the murder of T. Eugene Cornett, continued today with further defense evidence.

Dr. Dan Trigg, of Bristol, Va., in whose hospital Bausell and his son, Bernace Bausell, received treatment for wounds received in a gun battle at the Cornett home, described in detail the wounds received by the two. He was followed by five character witnesses for the defendant.

E. Eugene Cornett and his daughter, Virginia Cornett Bausell, the estranged wife of Bernace, were killed and the two Bausells wounded in the shooting affray in the Cornett home near Rural Retreat, January 13.

Ray to Resign As Maryland Party Leader

Democrat Will Retain Job as Collector of Internal Revenue for Area.

Baltimore, July 23 (Spl.).—Complying with an order of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, the chairman of Maryland's Democratic State central committee, J. Enos Ray, will resign his post in September, he stated today.

Mr. Ray also is collector of internal revenue for Baltimore, and so comes within the scope of Secretary Morgenthau's ruling that no official of the Treasury Department could hold a political job at the same time. Mr. Ray decided to give up the political job rather than sacrifice the internal revenue post.

As successor to Mr. Ray, State Insurance Commissioner William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, probably will be selected, according to reports. The selection is to be made at the party convention at the Rennert Hotel in Baltimore on September 20.

Supports Walsh.

One of those at first boomed for the job, it is said, is Secretary of State David C. Winebrenner 3d, but he is reported to have refused to accept the post under any circumstances. Instead, he urged that Walsh be given the post, and in this he was backed by E. Brooke Lee, Ritchie lieutenant from Montgomery County, and Attorney General William Preston Lane, of Hagerstown.

Mr. Ray is now in Sibley Hospital, in Washington, where he is recovering from a lengthy illness. Today he informed Democratic leaders of his decision to abandon the party post, but informed them he would like to keep it until the Democratic convention. Undersecretary Morgenthau's ruling, he would be obliged to retire on September 1, but Mr. Morgenthau is said to have made a special ruling that will permit Mr. Ray to keep the post for three weeks longer.

Wanted City Chairman.

When it was learned here that Mr. Ray would resign the Democratic chairmanship, there was some disposition on the part of city leaders to urge that a city man be selected for the post. They pointed out that Mr. Ray has been in the saddle since 1923, and it is time, they argued, for a Baltimorean to get a shot at it.

But since the city has only 42 votes in the State convention out of a total of 148, it was realized that the countians could easily elect one of their own leaders, if they wished, over the opposition of the Baltimore bosses. Accordingly, the agitation for a city chairman of the State group has been virtually abandoned.

Two Vessels Burn; Crews Are Saved

Pamlico Sound Boats Are Total Loss.

Norfolk, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Two Pamlico Sound boats were burned and are a total loss, according to reports received today at Norfolk division headquarters of the Coast Guard.

A radio message from the cutter Pamlico, which has its base at New Bern, N. C., reported the loss of the oil screw steamer New Bern. The crew was taken off by a passing vessel.

The Fort Macon (N. C.) station reported loss of the Connie Mack, which went ashore on Beaufort bar and was burned, the crew of four being rescued.

Danville Jails Youth On Charges of Girl

Danville, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Charged with a major offense against a 9-year-old girl, John Goforth, 19, was held in jail today.

3 Candidates File Papers in Anne Arundel

Munroe, Rogers and Frank to Run; Entries Are Later Than Usual.

Annapolis, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Three aspirants for political offices in Anne Arundel County filed certificates of candidacy with the board of election supervisors today.

They are Frank A. Munroe (Republican), of Annapolis, for clerk of the circuit court; W. Coleman Rogers (Republican), for county commissioner, Second District, and George E. Frank (Democrat), Annapolis, for sheriff.

Mr. Munroe was his party's candidate for court clerk four years ago, and gave Frank S. Revell, Democratic organization leader, a close race. Rogers was defeated for commissioner in the same campaign. Mr. Frank is making his first move in the political arena.

The primary election will be held in September and the general election in November. Aside from candidates for Governor, the other State officials, legislative and all county offices are to be voted for. Candidates are several weeks behind the usual period in announcing, a condition ascribed to somewhat unsettled conditions within the ranks of the two major parties, apparent absence of slate-making by a small group of political leaders as formerly, and activities of a nonpartisan movement by the Better Government League, coupled with talk of a fusion ticket.

Old Felt Hat Acts As Foster Mother To 18 Baby Quail

Lahore, Va., July 23 (AP).—R. S. Ellis, a farmer here, has an old felt hat which is foster mother to 18 baby quail — their own mother having been killed by Ellis' mowing machine in his hay field.

The mother bird was decapitated as she sat on her nest and Ellis, a sportsman as well as a farmer, picked up 18 eggs from beneath her, placed them in his hat and headed for his hen house to get a bantam hen which he had setting there. His idea was to hatch the quail eggs under the hen.

Returning later to where he had left the hat full of eggs, Ellis found that several had already hatched and others were cracking their shells. The bantam adopted the quail chicks which are all alive and thriving, Ellis says.

George Myers Files In Judgeship Race

Princess Anne Attorney Replies to Rumors.

Princess Anne, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Filing of his certificate of candidacy in each of four counties, comprising the first judicial circuit, is the reply made today by George H. Myers, Princess Anne attorney, to rumor that he would withdraw from the race for chief judge of this circuit.

Informed of rumors that he would quit, Mr. Myers, who announced his candidacy two months ago, made plans to file in each county and left Princess Anne today for Cambridge, Snow Hill and Salisbury.

Four others have announced, but only Mr. Myers has filed. He is a Democrat.

Man Shoots Wife As Night Intruder

Richmond, July 23 (AP).—W. H. Welsh heard a noise in his back yard early today.

He took a pistol and went to investigate. He found nothing. Returning he saw a shadowy form outlined against the door. He fired. There was a scream. He had shot his wife.

She had followed him downstairs. Mrs. Welsh was treated for shoulder and arm wounds. Ambulance physicians said her condition was not serious.

Physician Dies; Prison Friend Of John Brown

Dr. Briscoe Ranson Gave Food to Slavery Foe Awaiting Death.

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Dr. Briscoe Baldwin Ranson, native of Virginia, Confederate veteran, who as a boy once carried food and a Testament to John Brown as the latter lay in prison in Charles Town awaiting execution, died at his home here last night.

Services will be held Wednesday afternoon with burial in Charles Town, W. Va.

Dr. Ranson, a native of Staunton, was born in 1845, son of James M. and Mary Baldwin Ranson. They came to Jefferson County, settling at Charles Town, shortly before the Civil War. His father was a member of the Letcher Cadets, designated to guard John Brown.

Gun Search In Vain.

Sent by his mother to the Brown cell with food and a Bible, Ranson found the prisoner on a cot, head bandaged, and was treated cordially, he related. Later Ranson came here to get guns from the arsenal, but found it burned by the Union forces.

He joined the Confederate army at 16, enlisting with Capt. George Baylor's Company B, Twelfth Virginia, of the Jeb Stuart Cavalry, and fought throughout the war with that company except for a short time he served in another unit. He was wounded and captured at the battle of Brandy Station and was kept a prisoner in Washington for some months. After the war, he completed his studies at the University of Virginia, and the University of Maryland.

His first professional work was at Charles Town in 1873. He maintained active practice until he was 85.

He was a surgeon for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and at his retirement, was reported the oldest physician in the company's service. He was one of the few remaining Confederate veterans in Jefferson County and the last member of Capt. Baylor's company, recruited almost entirely from Jefferson County men.

Survived By Wife.

He was a member of Jefferson Camp of Confederate Veterans, the Masons, and the Episcopal Church.

He was twice married. His first wife, Miss Nannie Truston Forrest, died in 1886. Three of four children born to that union survive, Deaconess Anna L. Ranson, Sendai, Japan; Dr. Briscoe B. Ranson, Maplewood, N. J.; and James M. Ranson, residing here.

In 1899 he married Miss Josephine Yantis, who survives with one daughter, Josephine, residing here.

Hagerstown, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—His oil-soaked clothing catching fire from a match while he was lighting a pipe, W. Staton Garlock, State roads worker, is in Washington County hospital in a critical condition.

His wife, hearing his cries, threw water upon him as he lay on the floor trying to extinguish the flames.

Hancock Apple Belt Damaged By Hailstorm

Much Fruit Is Bruised; Aridity Ruins Gardens in Loudoun.

Hagerstown, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—A survey completed in the Hancock fruit belt today revealed serious damage to apples from the hail which pelted ripening fruit late Saturday.

Specimens brought from the orchards of the American Fruit Growers by R. S. Dillon and John Caspar showed large bruises which will make many unfit for marketing as Grade A.

Some growers' losses will be reduced by hail insurance. The hailstorm cut a narrow path through orchards in the Hancock belt, one of the largest apple-growing areas in the United States.

Leesburg, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—Heat and drought have taken their toll of farm and garden crops in Loudoun County.

Should rains come at this late date much could not be saved. Gardens are drying up. Corn, tomatoes and lima beans are suffering most. The tomato crop, at its height now, is almost a failure. The hot sun is blistering the tomatoes and the blooms are falling off, thus ruining the later crop. The ground is so dry that it is useless now to plant fall gardens.

The corn crop is seriously menaced, the leaves rolling up, and farmers say that unless rain comes soon it will be a total failure. Grazing lands are becoming sere and dry, lawns are brown and the general condition of the county, which has not had a good rain in more than three weeks, is bad.

Maryland Pays Gibbons Honor On Anniversary

Special Mass Celebrated at Shriver Home in Carroll County.

Westminster, Md., July 23 (Spl.).—Marking the 100th anniversary of the birth of James Cardinal Gibbons, late Archbishop of Baltimore, a special mass was celebrated this morning at the Catholic Chapel, at Union Mills, Carroll County, where Cardinal Gibbons celebrated his last mass.

Located on the grounds of the estate of Miss Molly O. Shriver, where the cardinal was a frequent visitor, the chapel is closely associated with his life, as it was here that he celebrated the first mass ever held in the chapel.

At the same altar where Cardinal Gibbons often stood, the Rev. Martin P. J. Egan, rector of St. John's Catholic Church, Westminster, celebrated mass today at 7:30 a. m. Those present at the service, including members of the Shriver family and representatives of the local parish, received holy communion for the Cardinal.

Simple Services Held in Baltimore

Baltimore, July 23 (Spl.).—Extreme simplicity marked services at the Catholic Cathedral here today on the 100th anniversary of the birth of James Cardinal Gibbons, the outstanding Catholic churchman in American history.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, of Washington, auxiliary bishop of the Baltimore Archdiocese, celebrated mass at the cathedral at 8 a. m. A large crowd of persons of many religious affiliations attended the services.

Later, the worshipers were admitted to the crypt where Cardinal Gibbons lies buried. Floral tributes from Catholic organizations were placed in the crypt, and there were brief and solemn ceremonies there.

At noon the city hall bell tolled 100 times in honor of the cardinal, and the bells of scores of churches throughout the city joined in.

Cardinal Gibbons was honored in Ireland yesterday by the man who succeeded him as archbishop of the Baltimore Diocese, Archbishop Michael F. Curley, who is spending his vacation at his native town of Athlone, Ireland, held a memorial mass for the late cardinal in the church there.

A number of Cardinal Gibbons' ecclesiastical garments were displayed at the Enoch Pratt Free Library here today. They were loaned the library by Archbishop Curley and Mgr. Harry A. Quinn, of the Baltimore Cathedral, who was one of the principal speakers at the commemorative services at the Gibbons statue in Washington yesterday.

Radio Waves and Ripples

COLUMBIA'S girl-for-Dick Powell contest came to a quiet, undramatic end yesterday, so far as the local portion is concerned, with the selection by the judges of Miss Helen Mack Ault, 24-year-old radio singer and former musical comedy star.

It took two weeks, 200 contestants, several gallons of soda pop and five or six judges, with the aid of studio officials, to pick the blonde, brown-eyed little lassie.

It was close toward the end. Selections had narrowed down to 15 and when the judges dropped names into a hat the vote was Helen Ault, 6; Ernestine Gardner, 3, and Mary Whelchel, 1.

All agreed that Miss Gardner deserves to be developed and trained. Miss Whelchel, too, has a warm, natural way of singing that made a powerful appeal to this department.

But Miss Ault, with her stage and radio experience, plus her own undoubted ability, was the only logical selection. She must play the part of a hat-check gal in a big hotel. She must have plenty of typical American zest, as well as a warm, appealing voice. Miss Ault has both.

You've heard her over WJSV for the last year. Before that she played with Eddie Dowling for 97 weeks in "Honeymoon Lane," in "Sweet Adeline," with Helen Morgan, and "Three's a Crowd." She's also played in stock at the Belasco Theater here.

Born at Round Hill, Va., she has lived in the District most of her life. She left Western High School to join Eddie Dowling.

A PALL of gloom hung over the studios yesterday morning. Announcers found no joy in their own voices. Stenogs gazed listlessly out of the windows. Even the minds surveyed new advertising contracts with no savor.

Radio has preened itself with reviewing battleships, flagpole sitters and Presidents, but failed to "cover" the shooting of John Dillinger.

Quietly, when the flash came over the wires at 11:10 p. m. yesterday, city editors spoke terse orders. Soon newsboys barked the announcement at theater patrons. And the networks had the exquisite pleasure at 11:25 p. m. of interrupting dance programs to announce the demise of Mr. Dillinger.

WBBM, the C. B. S. Chicago outlet, and WENR, N. B. C. station, told patrons they had "an interesting news bulletin."

Other famous shootings in history have been aired. Take that of Dan McGrew. But radio muffed the opportunity of covering Dillinger's death.

"Federal agents were too secretive," was all they had to say in explanation.

Your Announcer Is——

ARTHUR GODFREY: "Fortune hath smiled upon this man." At the age of two they caught him breaking phonograph records and strumming notes on the neighbor's banjo. With slightly damaged feminine hearts in his wake, he emerged full-blown at the age of 17, joined the Navy and went to sea as radio operator. Kept at this with minor lapses for seven years while he took an occasional fling at selling typewriters, auditing correspondence, selling advertising, breaking dishes, making tires, and coaxing widows to buy headstones at which Art Godfrey says he salted away plenty of money.

Surviving in minor flop in the show business, a turn at banjoing with a Chicago night club, he joined the Coast Guard in 1927, attaining new heights as radio operator. The Godfrey personality still on the make, he turned announcer at WFBR (Baltimore) and again tweaked feminine hearts with his banjoing. The fall of 1930 found him at WMAL breathing his chesty mellow voice into the Breakfast Club mike. Washington maidens, unappreciated housewives and envious males sat in blissful enchantment as the voice of this blonde, barrel-chested Adonis entered the room. Then one morning he breezed into the portals of WJSV. One night Winchell, jaded after a round of roistering, tuned in on Godfrey's midnight show, decided to stay with the lad until dawn, brought coffee in while the golden voice ad-libbed sweet nothings until 9 a. m. So . . . . now Art aims to be "a big shot in radio" which his own "nite spot" and band. Providing his private plane doesn't lose a wing, you may expect to hear more from this easy, irrepressible, overgrown laddie of the air waves.

"THEY didn't get there yet," said a local radio mind yesterday. She was referring to those 10 bombing planes which were to have alighted at Fairbanks, Alaska, yesterday morning at 10 o'clock.

"It won't be until some time this evening," the mind continued. So, dear listeners, when the Army fliers get to Alaska at 9 p. m., C. B. S. will still have its equipment in abeyance ready to convey the latest achievement of aviation to the air.

Meanwhile, we suggest as another parlor amusement a game of guessing when the stratosphere balloonists will get off the earth at Rapid City, S. Dak. They were last heard from when listeners were told why the take-off had been held up—bad weather and all that sort of thing.

THEY'VE found a new outlet over at WMAL for the talents of Bill Coyle, erstwhile N. B. C. sports announcer. Monday, July 30, at 10:45 p. m., you will find him on the WMAL spot nursing a new idea.

At first the minds decided to call it "Stutter and Stammer," but instead his program will be known as "According to Coyle." In a light, humorous fashion and with as little pedantry as possible, Bill hopes to help customers with their spelling and mispronunciation of common words. He'll invite comments and advice from listeners.

Tomorrow Coyle will handle the Legion bouts with Maxie Baer refereeing at 10:15 p. m. as Nattie Brown and Art Hutick fight it out. Maybe Baer will favor the mike with a few fisticuffic comments.

Whitecaps.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

And Everybody Was Happy

For two or three days after Mr. Man's hunt for the thieves, he was pretty busy about his farm. He had cut lots of wood and he kept Hee-Haw pretty busy bringing it to the house. And it was time to gather his corn and get up his pumpkins and potatoes and other crops, and so he didn't have much time to worry about the Creek Folks. Anyway, there were no bear tracks there and no sheep had been killed, not any big things carried away, and so he thought that just a few coons and hawks had been to his place. And he could kill them some time after he got his crops all in. His things all looked so good to him, and it was so good to have Hee-Haw back to help him, that he was pretty happy. Mrs. Man could even hear him trying to whistle that tune that he had heard the band play that day when they went to the circus, "Oh, It Ain't Agoin' to Rain No More."

As for Mrs. Man, well, she had tried on her new hat and dress a half-dozen times, and smiled at herself in the looking glass, and thought how well she was going to look when she went to church next Sunday. And she certainly did some good cooking. Mr. Man just loved the old-fashioned cake made with black molasses, and she made the best one she knew how to make. And she mended all of Mr. Man's clothes and sewed on his buttons and darned his socks. She gathered vegetables and apples and other things, and canned them for the winter. They were really the happiest days that either of them had ever known.

And what do you reckon caused it all? Blackie Bear! Funny, isn't it? Well, let's see: Blackie Bear took Mr. Mans' donkey, and so Mr. Man didn't have any wagon to ride around in, and he stayed at home most all the time. And he couldn't just lie around the house and do nothing, and so he worked his crops. And Uncle Joe and some other neighbors were good enough to lend him a donkey when he needed one to plow his crops. And so, because he worked more, he made more crops. And because he thought he had to buy another donkey, he saved a lot of money, and now with that money he had bought a lot of things that made him and his wife happy.

So didn't Blackie Bear buy Mrs. Man's new dress and hat and the lots of things they got in town? So you see things are not always as bad as they seem, and you see how Blackie was really helping Mr. Man while Mr. Man was trying to kill Blackie. Some time Mr. Man thought there was no use trying to make things just to feed Blackie, but just look after what he and his wife have now, just because he kept on working.

District Fire Losses In June Hit $23,575

Fires caused damage of $12,590 to buildings and $10,625 to contents in the District in June, Acting Fire Chief J. Carrington reported to District Commissioners yesterday.

There were 147 fires in which the loss was less than $1,000 each, two in which the loss was greater than $1,000 and 109 in which no loss was reported. There were 75 fires in automobiles, 132 in buildings and 12 involving street cars, Chief Carrington reported.

Swimming Contests Reveal Improvement

A swimming contest yesterday at Camp Good Will, in Rock Creek Park, showed marked improvement in youngsters who have been spending two weeks at the camp. Outstanding among the girls were Virginia Leebrick, Josephine Zanalotti and Elaine Smallwood.

The boys winning first places were Frank Leebrick, Paul Mock and George Follin. Captains Harry English and Charles Welsh did the judging.

Science has applied streamlining only to speedy vehicles that need it—fast trains, automobiles and airplanes. Nobody has bothered to streamline a farm tractor. Nature, however, with characteristic lavishness, has been more generous. Fast fish and birds in flights are well streamlined—but even more so is the slug. And the slug is one of the slowest creatures on earth.

The star-power motor illustrated above actually converts the light of distant stars into heat, then electricity, then mechanical energy. It employs a highly sensitive thermocouple to convert radiated heat into electricity. Electricity is converted into mechanical energy by the galvanometer.

Although, of course, the mechanical energy produced by the instrument is very slight, it is measurable and can be seen in the movement of the galvanometer indicator. Thus the amount of light from any particular star can be measured.

The light of the star under consideration is let fall upon one terminal of the thermocouple. This increases the temperature at this point very slightly, and gives rise to an electric current. The amount of electricity varies directly with the difference of temperature within certain limits. The final step is the galvanometer, by which the amount of electricity, and indirectly the amount of heat, can be measured.

Exit Dillinger.

No sooner is Dillinger dead than sentimentalists hail him as the greatest criminal of his era. Realists know he was his era's greatest example of the fact that crime is a losing game.

He conducted a score of holdups—and had to spend the booty on trials which ended in his conviction. He engineered jail deliveries—and was compelled to lead the existence of a hunted animal. He robbed banks—and was forced to fling away the loot in the expense of escape and the high cost of concealment. He coerced allegiance—and was betrayed. On several occasions he committed murder to serve his own purposes. As a result he was shot down like a rabid dog in a Chicago alley.

It is pointed out, with a morbid second-hand pride, that he defied the law as few men have succeeded in doing: he would have lived longer had he been a beggar—longer and with fewer hardships. While he was at large, his timid admirers declared that he had courage; now that he is dead, the manner of his death has demonstrated that it was only desperation.

The law took too long with Dillinger: that is its reproach. But Dillinger profited nothing by his challenge to the law—and that is his epitaph.

Wanted—An Insular Policy.

Advocates of Statehood for Hawaii are taking advantage of the visit of President Roosevelt to press their case. Plans apparently have been made to present several grievances to the President along with claims that the Hawaiian Islands are as much a part of the United States as California or Texas. The visit may have a significant bearing upon our future insular policy.

Four States have fewer people than the Hawaiian Islands; seventeen pay less in Federal taxes. From the standpoints of educational advancement, economic stability and capacity in self-government it does appear that Hawaii would be able to assume the responsibilities of Statehood. But other questions are involved. At present the States form a contiguous and more or less homogeneous commonwealth. Even though Hawaii came under the American flag in much the same way as did Texas, the problem of admitting those tropical islands to Statehood is very different.

Similar, although not identical, issues arise in the relationship of Puerto Rico, Alaska and the Virgin Islands to the Federal Government. Any movement to give these territories voting representation in Congress would meet with vigorous opposition. Yet they are part of that political entity known as the United States. As such their rights ought to be defined and carefully safeguarded. A great deal of the agitation for Statehood or complete separation from their foster mother country might be eliminated if Congress would follow a consistent and equitable insular policy. When that body discriminates against sugar producers, or other groups in Hawaii and Puerto Rico, it is quite natural for them to ask for representatives who could join in the log-rolling on Capitol Hill.

Creation of the new division of territories and insular possessions in the Department of the Interior is a step in the right direction. Aside from coordinating the Government's relations to these outlying territories, this agency should exert considerable influence upon future policies. Fairness and consistency in the enactment of legislation affecting the territories would not dispose of the Statehood issue, but it would go a long way toward satisfying the practical demands of the disgruntled groups. In the development of such a policy the new division of territories has a unique opportunity for service.

End Of An Experiment.

Nebraska's 25-year experiment with a system of bank deposit guaranty has at last come to an end. It collapsed some time ago but litigation and efforts to liquidate unsatisfied claims prolonged the life of the discredited system.

As is usual in such cases, the early years of the experiment aroused great hopes for the future. National banks gave up their charters in order to incorporate under State laws and enjoy the advantages of the so-called insurance. State banks multiplied, and their deposits increased nearly 450 per cent during the first nine years of operation under the new system. Business was good and bank failures were few, so that there was no test of the ability of the guaranty fund to stand up under adversity.

The postwar depression brought collapse of agricultural prices and calamity in the form of bank failures. In 1930 efforts to rehabilitate the insolvent system were abandoned, and the law repealed. Although the fund was unable to meet its obligations long before the date of repeal, State banks that were solvent were compelled to pay $17,700,000 into the fund over a period of 17 years.

The experience of Nebraska is typical of what has happened in every State that has set up a similar system. First there is a rush to participate, encouragement to unsound banking expansion, and then business reverses, followed by collapse of the system, with losses to depositors as well as to sound banks.

An Unnecessary Muddle.

The controversy over location of the proposed adult tuberculosis hospital has reached a stage of absurdity. Apparently no one wishes to take responsibility for upsetting the plan to develop a tuberculosis treatment center at Glenn Dale, Md., where the District has already spent a large sum on a children's sanitarium. Yet plans are going forward to select another site for the adult hospital.

The Glenn Dale site was chosen by the District Commissioners as a matter of course. It had been previously selected by a committee of experts as the most desirable location within reasonable distance of the city. It is approved by the highest medical authorities of the Federal Government and the District as well as the tuberculosis committee of the District Medical Society. There would be no reason, of course, to abandon this carefully prepared plan without some powerful influence from the outside.

In connection with the District's request for PWA funds for construction of the proposed sanitarium Secretary Ickes expressed an opinion that a higher site should be chosen. His attitude was vigorously criticized. Physicians pointed out that altitude is a secondary consideration in the treatment of the white plague. Attention was called to the inaccessibility of most mountain sites for all except families with private automobiles. (The Maryland site has good public transportation facilities.) In the midst of this controversy Secretary Ickes announced that he has an open mind on the subject.

As a matter of fact, the PWA Administrator has no responsibility whatever for selection of a site for a District hospital. That is a function of the Board of Commissioners. It was unfortunate that he expressed a preference for a mountain site. But if he really has an open mind on the subject now, it is time to abandon the search for a new site which grew out of the assumption, whether justified or not, that funds for the hospital would not be forthcoming if the Commissioners should insist on locating it at Glenn Dale.

There is a serious question as to whether or not the District should build a tuberculosis sanitarium with PWA funds if it must be widely separated from the institution just completed. Overhead expenses of maintaining two hospitals would be excessive. The District might find it necessary to establish transportation facilities to the adult hospital, if it should be located on a distant mountain site. Expenses thus incurred might exceed any saving that could be effected through the PWA grant.

The first question to decide, therefore, is whether it would be sound policy to abandon the centralized project at Glenn Dale. Until that issue has been thoroughly analyzed and the proposition has been placed squarely before the PWA, it is impossible to justify the waste of time and money in investigation of proposed new sites.

Stating The Problem.

The Department of Labor reported a slight decline in factory employment in June, but the index was 21 per cent above the level of June, 1933, and except for April and May, higher than at any time since December, 1930. As more than 50 per cent of wage earners in all manufacturing industries are covered by these reports, they are fairly representative of the gains that have occurred during the year.

Nobody knows how many persons are still idle, however, or how many have been reemployed. For lack of a comprehensive official reporting service all estimates are mere guesswork. But it is quite certain that the gains in employment, while large in absolute numbers, have not been great enough to absorb more than a fraction of the many millions who were out of work at the low point of the depression. Unofficial estimates as to the total number of idle at that time range from 13,000,000 to 16,000,000, with the lower figure more frequently quoted.

Estimates of the number that have secured employment during the past year also vary widely, but on the assumption that about 3,000,000 persons have found work in private employment, there probably remain 10,000,000 unemployed. Included in this total, of course, are persons who are in search of work but who are really unemployable. Allowance must also be made for the fact that a certain number of workers are always temporarily unemployed because of seasonal factors, normal labor turnover, &c. It is believed, for instance, that probably 3,000,000 persons were unemployed at the height of the predepression boom. Then, too, in these times many persons who would ordinarily not be trying to earn a living are forced to seek work. There is no way of knowing what allowance to make for this fluctuating group of applicants for jobs.

Work relief has been provided by Governmental agencies for some, but those so employed are still a problem for the future. There is in sight no improvement in industrial activity which would be great enough to absorb the major part of this idle army. Unemployment insurance would take care of persons out of work for limited periods, but it can not solve the problem of chronic unemployment due to a lack of profitable openings for labor in industry. Finally, continued support at Government expense of large bodies of able men is not only socially intolerable, but, if indefinitely prolonged, it would be financially and politically disastrous.

To state the problem in these terms does not imply that the outlook is hopeless, but it does suggest the need for intensive study of the problem of unemployment, not as a passing aspect of a great emergency but as a permanent challenge to modern industrial communities.

Thoughts On Funding.

Rumors that the Government contemplates an extensive funding and conversion operation next fall have reached the stage at which the size and the terms of the offering are beginning to be discussed.

As the banks now hold in their portfolios close to 60 per cent of the entire public debt of the country, it is clearly desirable to proceed with the funding of short-term issues with a view to placing them in the hands of the investing public. Moreover, the existence of about $10,000,000,000 of short term and intermediate debt is a source of embarrassment to the Treasury, in addition to being an obstacle to more widespread distribution of Government issues.

If the Government budget were balanced, or if there were even good prospect of a balance in the near future, there would be no reason to doubt the advisability of issuing funding bonds at low rates of interest. Unless the Government curbs its emergency spending program, however, and refrains from further monetary experimentation, there is grave danger that its credit will be impaired, leaving holders of Government securities in possession of depreciated promises to pay.

Even if a funding issue were to prove highly successful it would not indicate any impregnability of Government credit. It would merely demonstrate the effects of recent monetary and credit policies. Those policies have resulted in raising the excess reserves of member banks to a figure not far from $1,900,000,000 and have enabled the Treasury to place large amounts of its obligations with the banks.

The credit of any government depends in the long run upon its ability and willingness to pay. If it relies habitually upon borrowing to cover budgetary deficits, those from whom it borrows will ultimately be the losers.

The public debt already exceeds $27,000,000,000. The spending program is continuous and the resources with which to meet it have to be obtained by further borrowing. The deficit for the past fiscal year amounted to approximately $4,000,000,000, another deficit is in prospect, and hopes of a balanced budget in the fiscal year 1935-36 are no longer seriously entertained. Moreover, Congress has authorized the Government to assume contigent liabilities and guarantees amounting to many more billions of dollars.

These are the pertinent facts which trouble close students of the Administration's fiscal policies. They are not reassured by the fact that at present there is an active market for low-yield Government issues, which provides a good basis for a future funding issue.

"Not Without Honor . . ."

An interesting question regarding monuments in Washington was raised by Assistant Secretary of State Moore last week at the dedication of a bridge across the Rappahannock in commemoration of James Madison. "Although Madison and Jefferson are certainly responsible for making Washington the Capital City," he said, "they have no public monuments there." Why have these two statesmen been so grossly neglected?

No discriminating observer would say that Jeffersonianism is in vogue at present. Jefferson is most frequently quoted to show how far the Administration has departed from his philosophy. Consequently, many Americans who had given little thought to this stalwart character of the Revolutionary period have come to hold a genuine admiration for his views. Since advocates of the New Deal are bound by tradition and political ties to the name of Jefferson, devotion to his memory has become well-nigh unanimous. It might be an excellent time to commemorate his work in behalf of the country and his contribution to our philosophy of government by the erection of an appropriate memorial here in the Capital City.

"Madison," as Mr. Moore insists, "really earned his name as father of the Constitution." In some quarters there is a tendency to cast aspersions upon Constitution makers whose efforts seem to have hindered revolutionary changes. But that is a narrow view. It is not shared by the more astute New Dealers. They find themselves in the position of praising the wisdom of the fathers who could draft, more than a century and a half ago, a document that can now be stretched to cover the broad implications of "the more abundant life."

It would be a pity indeed if Congress should fail to take advantage of this apparently remarkable opportunity to atone for past negligence.

The Losing Game.

Post-Obit for Post-Depressionists

By Leonard Bacon.

(From the Atlantic Monthly.)

"Grant me, kind Heaven, to find some happier place!"—Johnson's London.

Upon the foul unfashionable quay
Where hulked the freighter bound for the South Sea,
My old friend waited. I could not dispel
Trouble in my spirit at that long farewell.
"This ship," I said, "why pick a rusty waif
Of tragic seas, unlovely and unsafe?
I know of many better ways to die.
Sail on that lobster pot? I can't think why."

"Think!" he replied, biting the word in two,
"Why, that, my lad, is what you've got to do.
Think of a dropsical republic's pains.
Think of a brain trust trusting to what brains!
Think of our fathers who passed on the fire,
And think of six-score millions gone haywire.
Think of the farmer in the shell game licked.
Think of the kicker. Consider, too, the kicked.
And think of brokers and the lies they lied,
Of buyers' markets, handsome, high and wide,
Of Rockefeller and the House of Morgan,
Of Darrow, Mellon and of Demogorgon.
Think about guts and nature in the raw,
Of Minneapolis and Martial Law.
Think about asses and the War of Classes
And the New Republic's sulphur and molasses.
Think of a kite that rose and likewise fell,
Of Atchison and American Tel. and Tel.
Think of those economic artless dodgers,
Professor Warren and Professor Rogers,
Whose thought no native intellect explains,
Nor even the transatlantic J. M. Keynes.
Think of rapt highbrows in committees snuggling,
Of Tugwell's babbling and of Richberg's juggling;
Of jurists lost in legislation's bog
Of Farley and his gangsters in a huddle
With credulous Cummings, mixing up the muddle,
Whose simple mind, one way and single-track,
Once sought to cut a Mellon that cut back;
Of Harold Ickes shrieking in despair,

"And think how Johnsons never are too few.
First there was Hiram. Now we suffer Hugh.
Who at that vocal flywheel dares to scoff,
That tells the Universe where it gets off?
Yet never the arch principle forgot,
To drop a subject when it got too hot,
Or let a method which he dared not try,
Innocuous, in a committee die.
When incandescent issues start to chafe,
With flaming violence he plays 'em safe,
And deems that day inglorious and inept
When no catastrophe has been sidestepped.
And though his champions may justly plead
That sort of thing's exactly what we need,
I can not think, in the strange times involved,
A problem dodged becomes a problem solved.
Yet one more thought. Conceive the passions ranklin'
In loyal hearts that ache for Cousin Franklin
Brooding o'er his witches' cauldron bubbling slowly,
Full of herbs less medicinal than Mol(e)y.
And think how, when the Herle-Berle's through,
Your Congressman will send the bill to you.
I tell you it's a bitter cup to drink of,
But that, my boy, is what you've got to think of."

Such converse my old comrade with me held
While the cranes clanked and quartermasters yelled.
He went on: "I'm fed up and that is flat.
How bear with bureaucrat and plutocrat?
How stand conservatives talking time-worn trash,
Their minds distracted about petty cash?
Uttering like parrots what was known for gammon
Sometime before the reign of Tutankhamen?
Who can not see, in the full blaze meridian,
That economics have gone non-Euclidian?
Feebly they chant amid the cataclysm
Baruch-room ballads against bimetallism.
And unto thee all happiness impute,
O golden-tongued Finance with serene loot.
Or view the Intelligentsia, if you will,
Every man Jack of them extremely ill
From constipated brains and logorrhoea,
But yelping for some five-year planacea,
Some played-out scheme misread, misunderstood,
Which will improve the whole damned neighborhood.
See those returning with paeans o'er the wave;
The dollar took them and the dollar gave—
A valid reason why the wise implore
Congress to get us back on gold once more.
"Ill fares the land, swift hastening to her fate,
Where wealth decays and boobs accumulate;
Where a declining demos must be courted
And those who venture naught must be supported;
Where wisdom is supplanted by loquacity
And there's a premium on incapacity.
That's why we have by popular consent
Such Representatives to represent.
It's hard to grant such origins of tosh
Represent anything at all, by gosh,
Indicate our tendency and our direction,
Afford of us a tolerable cross section.
No! In the Senate when the windbags blare,
The men we have elected are not there.
Herd impulses are sweet. But those unheard
Are sweeter, where our actual spokesmen gird
Their loins in labs, or on far railway lines,
On the walls of dams, in the corridors of mines.
Our spokesmen! Who, in paths beyond our knowing,
Keep an exanimate republic going.
I've done my bit. I'm weary of the task.
Now a quick exit's all the prize I ask.

"That's why I'm bound where gentle ocean shuts
Sweet isles apart, to live on coconuts.
If better men can do it, why not I?
When Roosevelt's levanted to Hawaii,
I flee 'a world each morning obsolete,'
A world of pasteurized milk and shredded wheat;
A world bright only with a morbid slime
Of dull society and stagnant crime;
A world that staggering to destruction walks
And talks and talks and talks and talks and talks.

Stay if you like. I'll never balk your wish.
Treat your pale leprosy and scratch your scurf.
Somehow I like the notion of warm surf
To hell with Newport! Devil take Bar Harbor!"

"Take care," said I, "before the worst befall,
In another moment you'll write 'Locksley Hall.'"
Which did not seem to trouble him a lot.
He looked me in the eye and asked "Why not?"

Yet I was not bamboozled by that bluff.
I said: "Old chap, you don't go far enough.
It's not traversing some dozens of degrees
Will insulate you from the times' disease.
The radiant isles are quick with human woe.
Ask Hall and Nordhoff. They will tell you so.
Nay! If a bright deliverance you would win,
Seek not the surf-ringed atolls. Search within.
Still in your eyes worn brightness I detect.
Revamp the remnants of your intellect.
Visit strange thought that mystery overwhelms,
The topless heights of philosophic realms.
View with a poet's visionary glance
Huge cloudy symbols of a high romance.
And seek to see with inly-piercing eyes
The blazing beauty that they symbolize.
Or, if you like, there's still another track.
We'll plump for science. Heisenberg and Dirac
Shall lead us through the mathematic door
Of infinitesimals, and we'll explore
Atomic vastitudes where never lie
Outfaces ruthless probability.
Or better yet, I think, for you and me,
Beyond frontiers of fiery nebulae,
Light as a dream our printless feet shall tread,
Where against starshine glooms the 'Horse's Head.'
But now an endless light-year's scarce enough
To part us from the feebleness and folly,
The brainless mirth, more brainless melancholy.
Let all such matters like a hell-broth bubble,
We're for the spheres with Shapley and with Hubble,
To draw from voids where Sirius flames afar
All the strange meaning of Van Maanen's star,
To traffic with existence that is rife
Eternally, before and after life,
To conquer terrors, whether Life's or Death's,
Castrate conventions, cauterize shibboleths,
And take our ease in an interstellar Zion.

What's Next In Art?

Postoffice, Tuesday.

"THE Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts has been justly viewed as holding the definitive 'American Salon.' . . . But today the Corcoran Gallery in Washington lines up with about the same kind of annual exhibitions. . . . Pittsburgh allows the helotry that is being driven out of Washington and other centers to disport itself in the sunlight of local approval, with everybody getting excited when ugly and ridiculous paintings of flowers receive the prize of the Allegheny County Garden Society."

You may not agree with the opinions of Mr. Watts. But you will have to admit that they are stimulating. Well, we feel that our devoted readers may relish a bit of stimulation.

Regarding the most recent state of American painting, Mr. Watts expresses views that are scarcely more rosiate than those which we the other day recorded from Mr. Henderson, touching American music. Regarding the near future, however, Mr. Watts is in some degree more optimistic.

Let's take the worse first.

Mr. Henderson thinks American music suffers because America has as yet no folk music and no National music background. Mr. Watts thinks we have a National background for painting, and have the painters as well. In fact, he thinks—in an aside—that we have the musicians also.

But, says Mr. Watts: "Just as . . . any second-class, third-class, fourth-class or fifth-class musician from Central Europe . . . can get a job of appearing mostly before (our) women's clubs . . . while first-class American interpreters have to be proved competent by infinite argument," so has it been, in effect, with our painters.

They were crowded out, Mr. Watts avers, by alien "helots who rushed to America, not to advance art . . . but to get a few American dollars in their jeans. Their patter about art was the kind of thing that a sleight-of-hand man goes in for when he intends to pull an egg out of your ear or a rabbit out of your pocket."

And those Americans who succumbed to what Mr. Watts calls an imitation of the foreign Modernist influence?

Their work, he declares, "had an offensive . . . anti-American slant. American scenery was despised and dragged in the gutter . . . The gutter school paints American countryscapes and city-scapes as a drab satire on reality. . . .

"It pretends to believe that American life is a mere congeries of backyards, backhouses, railroad-sidings and tank cars. And then it goes a step further and imitates the worst chromos of the 1830's and 1840's, representing the crude apprentice work of Connecticut clockmakers and sign painters as the art of the day."

But now, says Mr. Watts, the depreciated dollar has depreciated invasion from abroad and made room for sanity at home. He thinks American painters of what he considers the right sort are gradually asserting themselves—and the American patrons of the right sort of American painting.

Anyhow, they "are tired of having our murals, portraits of our men in public life, done by incompetent foreigners. . . . In spite of the tendency of the two extremes—the snobbery of upper society and the fanaticism of the proletariat—to go in for art through the helotry of Rivera, Orozco and the hopeless peons of Mexico—there is no question, but that American artists are going to assert themselves from now on as never before."

Look, says Mr. Watts, at the Government's Public Works of Art Project—whatever its faults. Look at the newly formed Fine Arts Foundation, headed by Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, late M. C. and representing the American Artists Professional League and the National Commission to Advance American Art:

"All over the country great art museums are the thing of the day. Not only New York and Boston, Baltimore and Washington, but Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City, San Francisco have museums and art-schools that are becoming the focus of strong individuality."

Stimulating, you see.

The Journalist's Code.

A newspaper man should be sharply suspicious of all invitations, of all gifts, of all compliments even. Every journalist must be, in this particular, like Caesar's wife—above suspicion. He can accept no favors; he can not afford embarrassing social contacts. Always he maintains so detached a position that when men think him wrong, they can not accuse him of being venal. Anonymous critics and enemies will, of course, say he has been bought; he must not only be able to laugh at such false accusations, but must also be able honestly to tell himself that he has no associations that color his point of view without his being aware of it. That is a hard ideal, but his is a hard life.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Foot-Notes and Gossip.

SVEN HEDIN, who was recently reported to be in trouble with the bandits of Sinkiang, China, is now in the clear again. The sister and biographer of this 69-year-old explorer writes the house of Dutton as follows:

THEO. HALL

"He has met with his life's greatest and most thrilling adventures. We have had news from him only the other day about how he and his companions had come just where the civil war in Sinkiang, the westernmost province of China, was at its height. The rebels tried to get hold of the expedition's cars, one of them a gift from Edsel Ford. When my brother did not agree, he and three of his men were roughly treated and threatened with death. It is perfectly marvelous that they were allowed to live. At another occasion about 100 soldiers surrounded their cars and shot about 50 shots without hitting anybody. When the Government troops came and forced the rebels, 90 per cent robbers, to retire, they had aeroplanes with bombs which exploded around my brother and his men, one explosion only 100 meters from their house. You understand how happy and grateful we are that the expedition members, as well as all the cars, are safe and in the best condition, and that they can go on with their task."

Before Marie Dressler fell ill, she finished the manuscript of her autobiography. First entitled "You Made Me What I Am Today," it is now called "My Own Story," and will be issued by Little Brown in October. . . . It takes Harold Nicholson's sly eye to go to the heart of a person. In "Curzon: the Last Phase" (just published by Houghton Mifflin), he writes of the great diplomat: "Lord Curzon would sit up to the early hours of the morning, carefully adding up his domestic accounts or writing indignant memoranda on the incidence of cost in the matter of that coalshed at Hackwood. . . . Curzon's misunderstanding of postwar developments was due . . . to his middle-class inability to assess proportions." . . . Viking Press hopes no one will accuse it of having any hand in the San Francisco strike. People who put two and two together might have seen something peculiarly opportune there considering the imminent appearance of Louis Adamic's "Dynamite: the Story of Class Violence in America." Fifty new pages in this reissue bring the data down to date and present the background of the California troubles.

Samuel Robers, whose "Dusk in the Grove" is the $10,000 Atlantic Prize Novel this year (incidentally the first prize-winner to be about America by an American), is spending the summer in Rhode Island. Middletown, on the Newport peninsula, has been identified as the locale of his novel . . . Ralph Roeder (of "Man of the Renaissance" fame) and his wife are at Nantucket. . . . Dorothy Parker is in Denver. . . . Albert Halper is in Maine, resting from the labors of reading proof on his forthcoming novel, "The Foundry." . . . Hollywood will soon see some of Erskine Caldwell's work in the films. He is busy there now. . . . Alexander Woollcott has an island in Vermont, where he is at present cozy-ing his old eyes and ears. . . . Dennis Wheatley, author of "Black August" (Dutton), has just returned to London from a grand tour of British South Africa and Portugese East Africa.

It never ceases to be amazing what the movies will call film material. One would scarcely think of David Lloyd-George's "War Memoirs" as a subject for celluloid heroics and fade-out clinches, but Metro-Goldwin-Mayer has recently broached the notion to the elder statesman. • • • Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, author of "How to be Happy Though Human," is at work on the final draft of "Women's Best Years." This feminine "Life Begins at Forty" will be published by Long & Smith early in September. • • • As if editing Esquire didn't keep Arnold Gingrich busy enough, he is producing a novel for Knopf to publish soon. A hint of his methods, but rather more of his efficiency, lies in the fact that he took a week off between issues, went to Bermuda, and there completed no less than 40,000 words. Further item, the novel is a trilogy in one volume—the same basic plot being treated in three different ways. Further item yet, the book's title, "Cast Down the Laurel," occurs in a poem by James Elroy Flecker.

Sometimes nothing is stranger about a book than its author—for which over-neat axiom, herewith two examples. • • • Mark Channing, author of that British India thriller, "King Cobra," soon to be issued in this country by Lippincott, speaks seven languages, believes firmly in spiritualism, is a good public speaker, composes nocturnes on the piano, has Indian mystics for particular friends, and can tear a full pack of cards in two with his hands. • • • Scarcely less exotic in tastes is Eric Hatch, author of that lively farce, "Road Show" (Little Brown). —It seems he has just traded his 21-year-old Rolls Royce for another that is only 11 years old. "Nothing but the best!" he avers.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Yoo Hoo, Prohibition!

It begins to look as if the best friend prohibition ever had is repeal.

• • • •

Everything that the drys tried to do to America is now being successfully accomplished by the wets.

• • • •

Nothing has done more for temperance than the terrible brands of liquor being put out since prohibition went out and repeal came in.

• • • •

The country is being flooded with so much offensive firewater that the cry of "Bring back the bootlegger!" is already being raised.

• • • •

Instead of the genuine, pure and palatable liquors the public expected to get with repeal, it is getting 5,700 varieties of alcohol that would take the hide off a buffalo.

• • • •

Compared with some of the legitimate distillers, the bootlegger was a purity fanatic.

• • • •

The bootlegger at least made some attempt to make it taste a little like rye or scotch, but some of these legalized distillers ask nothing except that it be liquid and nonexplosive.

• • • •

And it is all being done with the full cooperation of Washington. Under prohibition the bootlegger charged so much for even his bad whisky that only a few could afford it, but under the Federal Government's auspices, America is awash with bad liquor at such low prices that it is within the reach of all.

• • • •

The popular American host today is the fellow who boasts, "Come up to my house; I've got some prohibition stuff that I've had since before repeal. I got it right off a rum runner."

• • • •

We didn't mind those prohibition labels because we knew they didn't mean anything, but it hurts to be fooled with Government cooperation.

So Different.

Charlie Davis says he met an author last night who got a swell idea for his second novel from the film version of his first book.

"Well," sighs Arthur Murray, "repeal has increased one thing—the number of people who think they can sing."

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Spelling and Pronunciation.

When I was a boy, the two words that caused the largest number of casualties in spelling-down contests were separate and supersede. But nearly all persons who can spell fairly well have no trouble with these today; and in printed books one never sees them misspelled. The three words today that are most commonly misspelled in books are ecstasy, tranquillity, and tonsilitis. The correct spelling is as I have given it.

Although there are exceptions, the English usually write gipsy, the American gypsy. Both are right; and I wonder, if the people in question do any spelling, how they spell it themselves. The other day I read in a book written by a distinguished American a quotation ascribed to King George, in which he was made to say "gotten"—a word abhorrent to all Englishmen. He could not possibly have said it. Gotten is today, exclusively American though it was good English in the days of Queen Elizabeth.

I have never been able to determine what makes spelling come easy to some boys and girls and never so to others. It is not a matter of much reading; Stevenson was an omnivorous reader, but always a bad speller. His manuscript letters have curious errors. I think the best explanation, though even that does not cover everything, is what may be called ocular memory. Those of us who have always been naturally good spellers seem to remember with ease words we have seen in print; it is a matter of their appearance. When a good speller is occasionally bothered by a word like gauge, for instance, he will write it out both ways, and then his eye—that is, his eye-memory—instantly tells him which is right. Guard looks right, guage looks wrong.

The orthographical salvation of the business man is his stenographer; she must know how to spell. And I wonder whether the fact that thousands of business men now depend entirely on their secretaries and stenographers for their spelling has still further injured their own.

The novelist, William De Morgan, had little peculiarities in spelling which gave me great delight. If he asked a definite question, like, How hot was it yesterday? he said it was enquire. But if he asked a question in philosophy, he said it was to inquire. That is, enquiries expect definite answers, and inquiries do not. I myself think it preferable always to write enquire and enquiry, and then no one will be tempted to accent the first syllable. The second syllable should always be accented.

There is no reason why individuals should not spell certain words to suit themselves, provided there is some good authority for it. I always spell connexion, reflexion, inflexion—don't you rather like it yourself? You don't? Sorry.

Thoroughbreds, Stock, Men

By Robert Quillen

When a certain young man came into his inheritance, he found himself possessed of a large farm, a few thousands dollars and no knowledge of any way to earn a living.

He therefore decided to become a gentleman farmer and hire an expert to manage his affairs.

In the course of time he found an experienced and capable man to do the work; but it was necessary to make him a partner in the business, for there was no money to pay his salary.

"I shall furnish the land and equipment," said the young man, "and you shall furnish the brains and brawn. Then we shall divide the profits share and share alike."

Thus it was agreed. But while the young man knew nothing of farming, he did know something about the value of good blood and he insisted that all animals bought to stock the farm should be thoroughbreds.

"Our capital is limited," said he, "and we can buy but a few to make a start. But a thoroughbred eats no more than a scrub and brings a much greater price, so we must get the best of everything. Blood will tell, and nothing can take the place of good breeding."

So they bought registered stock of the best blood lines—cows and hogs and sheep and chickens—and began their venture with great expectations.

Apparently their hopes were justified. The crops were good; the stock multiplied; the surplus brought a great price, and no misfortune or storms or pests cut into the profits.

Yet each year, when the gains were divided, the young man found that his share was less than $10.

At last, in desperation, he hired another expert to examine the farm and discover where the fault lay.

The expert spent one day on the job and then reported. "Your trouble," said he, "is scrub stock."

"It can't be," said the young man. "Everything on the place is thoroughbred."

"Everything," said the expert, "except your partner. He comes of mongrel stock and inherited sticky fingers."

Strike Peace Move Ignored In Minneapolis

Truck Owners, Drivers Make No Reply to Conciliators.

Minneapolis, July 23 (AP).—Prospects for peace in the Minneapolis truck drivers strike teetered uncertainly today as employers held aloof from negotiations to settle the dispute.

An informant said the employers advisory committee would reject the proposal of the Rev. Francis Haas and E. H. Dunnigan, Federal mediators, for an employes' election to determine if the latter wanted to be represented by the union in negotiations with the owners.

The committee publicly refused to divulge its attitude on that question. Indications that the truck owners had decided to stand fast in hopes of breaking the strike were strengthened by their announcement that of 2,653 drivers employed by 110 firms, only 225 had failed to report for work or advise that they were available.

Strikers also had not replied to the conciliators' proposition.

Openly resentful at movement of trucks, pickets in automobiles followed commercial vehicles but did not try to stop them. The trucks were convoyed by heavy guards of armed police.

National Guardsmen still were billeted in the city, most of the force being quartered in a downtown armory, ready, if needed, for any outbreak of violence.

Mayor A. G. Bainbridge refused an extension of the week-end truce by which no armed convoys would be supplied owners.

City garbage trucks were prevented from moving, but strike leaders later said that was a "mistake" and that no attempt would be made in the future to halt them.

Taxicabs remained off the streets, though ice, milk and beer trucks operated.

Missing Man Back, Charges Kidnaping

Says Pair Took Wallet Containing $103.

Danville, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—L. B. Starling, Danville contractor missing since Friday, returned to his home here during the night saying he had been abducted and robbed of $103.

Chief of Police James H. Martin said "we have dropped the case."

Starling said that while he was waiting for a street car Friday, two white men in a car bearing Michigan tags arrived, one of them aiming a pistol at him, and ordering him into the car.

They took him into North Carolina, he said, plied him with liquor, and when he came to himself he was lying alone in some woods, his wallet missing. He stated he walked 5 miles to the nearest telephone, called his wife and returned the best way he could.

Hawaii Ready To Greet the President

Mr. Roosevelt to Get Picturesque Welcome at the Islands.

Will Be Entertained by Governor, Historical Pageant Planned.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

For those who have never visited the beautiful Hawaiian Islands there is no way to describe the beauty that awaits President Roosevelt when at dawn this morning he sights the shores of the islands. Before noon he will dock at Kailua, and long before that he will look down from the decks of the U. S. S. Houston and see the water dotted with the tiny outrigger canoes, in which the native boys paddle themselves among the islands.

As the Houston nears the harbor, more boys and girls will swim out to meet the boat, as they always do, diving far down in the clear blue water for the chance coins that are tossed to them.

The thrill of being the first President to visit the picturesque insular possessions of the United States must be great, and the tremendous welcome that awaits President Roosevelt will be spectacular.

Will Greet the President.

When the cruiser rounds Diamond Head, the lofty volcanic mountain which guards the harbor of Honolulu, the hundreds of small craft will be augmented by hundreds of others, bearing messages of welcome to the Chief Executive as in former days ancestors of the men in the boats welcomed homecoming chieftains.

Before he lands, the President will see the beautiful Royal Hawaiian Hotel, where he is to spend his brief sojourn in Honolulu; standing embowered in palm trees, on the edge of the famous Waikiki Beach. Gleaming pink and blue through the foliage, it will present a colorful and truly delightful sight.

Almost all the musicians in the islands have been gathered together to greet the President with native music as the Houston eases into the harbor. There, officials bearing more flowers than can be imagined, will salute their Chief, and bedeck him with the traditional "leis" of tropical blossoms. During his two or three-day stay, the President will be entertained by the Governor of the Territory of Hawaii, Mr. Joseph B. Poindexter, and undoubtedly, with his love of the water, will avail himself of the pleasure of bathing at one of the world's most famous and romantic beaches, Waikiki.

Historical Pageant Planned.

A pageant, representing the history of the islands will be presented for the Chief Executive during his visit, with costumes copied from the authentic robes of the native chieftains, which are in the museum of Honolulu. These robes are made of tiny feathers, red and yellow, taken from small birds which bear only one of these bright feathers on each of their more somber wings.

On Thursday the President has planned to attend the picnic given by the Harvard alumni in Hawaii for the Harvard baseball team, which is stopping in Honolulu en route to Japan, where they will pit their strength against the sons of Nippon.

Miss Wernette Wed in Chapel At Georgetown

Marriage to Mr. Charles Hurley Is Followed by Reception.

The wedding of Miss Frances Catherine Wernette, daughter of Justice N. D. Wernette, of the Idaho Supreme Court, of Boise, Idaho, and Mrs. Wernette, to Mr. Charles Hurley, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hurley, of Portsmouth, N. H., took place yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in the Dahlgren Chapel of Georgetown University.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Hurley, of Manchester, N. H., brother of the bridegroom, in the presence of a group of close relatives and friends.

The bride wore a gown of orchid mousseline de soie, fashioned with a long flared skirt, and fitted sleeves of lace of the same shade as the gown. Her large hat was of orchid mousseline and she carried an old fashioned bouquet of pastel flowers in a lace holder.

Miss Catherine McGill, daughter of Senator George McGill, of Kansas, and Miss Robye Gibson, of Roanoke, Va., were the bridesmaids. They wore frocks of pale yellow organdie fashioned with pleated capes of the same material, and small hats of yellow organdie. They carried bouquets of yellow Shasta daisies and blue delphinium.

Mr. J. William Hurley, another brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The ceremony was followed by a reception for those attending the wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Chisholm, after which the young couple left for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a white crepe ensemble with black velvet accessories. They will be at home after August 15, at Corcoran Courts.

Mr. Hurley was graduated from Holy Cross College at Worchester, Mass. and is a graduate of the Georgetown Law School.

Discarding the Obvious.

As I have often stated in these columns, there is more to winning Dummy play than sound technique. The Declarer is the general of an army consisting of twenty-six pasteboard soldiers and as such he is in complete charge of the movements of each and every one of his men. He must plan his attack, assign certain duties to each of his soldiers, and then be prepared to change his entire plan of campaign at a moment's notice, as new information comes to him in the early stages of the battle.

In today's hand, the Declarer, after looking at the Dummy, decided that he had only one chance of fulfilling his contract—taking a certain finesse. At Trick 2 a play was made by the defense which suddenly caused South to discard his original very simple line of play and adopt a more complicated one, which, despite its difficulty, seemed to offer the greater chance for success.

North, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♠	Pass
4♠(1)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The correct bid with the North hand. Although the North player has only 2 honor-tricks and 5 playing-tricks, his great length in spades plus the fact that he has passed originally justifies this triple Raise.

West, after fumbling about a bit, stumbled upon the best Opening lead—the diamond eight. South, before playing from Dummy to the first trick, stopped and took stock. He immediately saw there were two diamond tricks to be lost, and two heart tricks unless the heart Ace was in the East hand; therefore the fulfillment of his contract seemed to depend upon a simple lead up to the heart King. The Declarer, however, instantly realized that correct technique demanded that he duck the first round of diamonds and not play the Ace from Dummy. This would keep control of the suit for the time being at least, and permit him greater latitude in the later play.

East overtook his partner's diamond eight with the diamond nine, and correctly shifted to the heart Queen, fearing the possibility of Declarer's holding the A-Q-x of clubs and thus getting a valuable discard in Dummy. When East led the heart Queen South restrained himself from obeying the natural impulse to cover with the King, and played low. He realized that the East player, holding the A-Q-J of hearts and not just the Q-J, would not be so anxious to immediately shift to that suit, and even if he did shift, would lay down the Ace. South accordingly saw a new way in which his contract might be fulfilled. Marking the West player with the heart Ace, South knew it would drop on the third round if it were guarded only twice and the King would then be set up for a diamond discard from Dummy.

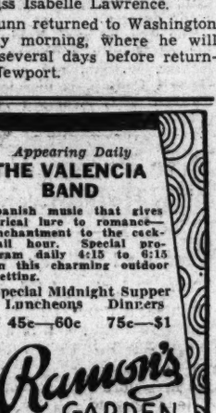
Of course East did not know that his partner's heart Ace was guarded three times, and obeying West's play of a small card on the heart Queen, he shifted back to diamonds. Declarer naturally won this second round of diamonds with the Ace in Dummy, and drew two rounds of trumps. He then played the Ace of clubs and a small club to Dummy's King, stripping both hands of that suit. The nine of hearts was now led from Dummy, and East's play was immaterial. Actually East did not cover the nine with the Jack but played the four-spot, South played a low card from his own hand and West won with the Ten.

The West player was now completely trapped. Because of Declarer's very fine hold-up on the first round of diamonds. West had no more cards of that suit to lead. A club lead would give South a ruff and discard and to lay down the Ace of hearts would set up South's King and enable him to discard a diamond in Dummy. Actually West played in the hope that South had another club in his hand and led the third round of that suit. South merely discarded Dummy's last diamond and trumped in his own hand, and was then able to claim the balance of the tricks.

Admittedly, the defense slipped to a very great extent, but this should not detract from credit, which is due South for a very intelligent line of play.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrows article.

Patmos Island Monks Play Host to Woman Artist In Castellated Monastery Off Coast of Asia Minor

By Hope Ridings Miller.

CARCASSONNE, long the Mecca for artists, has lost its appeal for at least one artist since she has visited two relatively unexploited islands in the Aegan Sea off the coast of Asia Minor.

"The islands of Patmos and Rhodes are far more beautiful than Carcassonne," said Miss Susanne Webb, of Nashville, Tenn., who is now in Washington completing a book about Rhodes.

Later, she may write a volume on Patmos, for it was there she had the singular experience of being a guest at the famous St. John monastery, the only woman traveling alone ever to be so honored.

But, at present, Rhodes is her major interest.

"I was so pleased with this enchanted island, I stayed there six months, although I had planned to be there only a few hours on my way to Egypt. Its architecture reminded me of Greece; it is more beautiful than any I had ever seen before."

Difficult to Say.

That statement from an artist who had spent ten years traveling and painting abroad meant a deal more than it would coming from the average traveler, so the interviewer leaned forward eagerly to learn why those little-known islands were lovelier than Carcassonne with its embattled turrets, its thickly foliaged trees, and its quaintly colorful houses.

"It's difficult to tell just why Rhodes is so beautiful," she began. "There aren't many trees, only a few palms and scattered scrubby plants. I suppose it is because there are so many wonderful remnants of Greek architecture, and that was what I was looking for.

"Then, too, I liked the people. Unaccustomed to tourists, the natives are nevertheless courteous and hospitable. And the children are so well behaved. Versed in oriental courtesy, they treat every stranger with respect."

An artist at work is never annoyed by the children, according to Miss Webb. Why they are so much better than Christian children is still a mystery to her.

No Tomatoes There.

"During the entire time I stayed and painted in Rhodes," she said, "I never had the embarrassing experience of being the target for ripe tomatoes and other dangerous missiles, as I often was in Spain and Italy."

She said she would also remember Rhodes pleasantly because visiting there was a fitting prelude for her trip to the Island of Patmos.

How did she, a stranger traveling alone, ever procure an invitation to be a guest at the noted monastery in Patmos-Town?

"It is the rule with the monks of St. John," she said, "to offer hospitality to strangers. Accordingly, when I arrived in Patmos-Town, I went at once to the monastery and presented a card sent by Greek friends in Rhodes. That was how I happened to remain a guest. I shall never forget that visit. Those Greek Orthodox monks, spending their lives in that structure 700 feet above the sea, live in a world of their own completely untouched by the world outside."

The monastery is supposed to be on the site where John the Apostle stood withdrawn from earthly things, like Moses on Sinai and Elijah on Carmel.

Marvelous Visit.

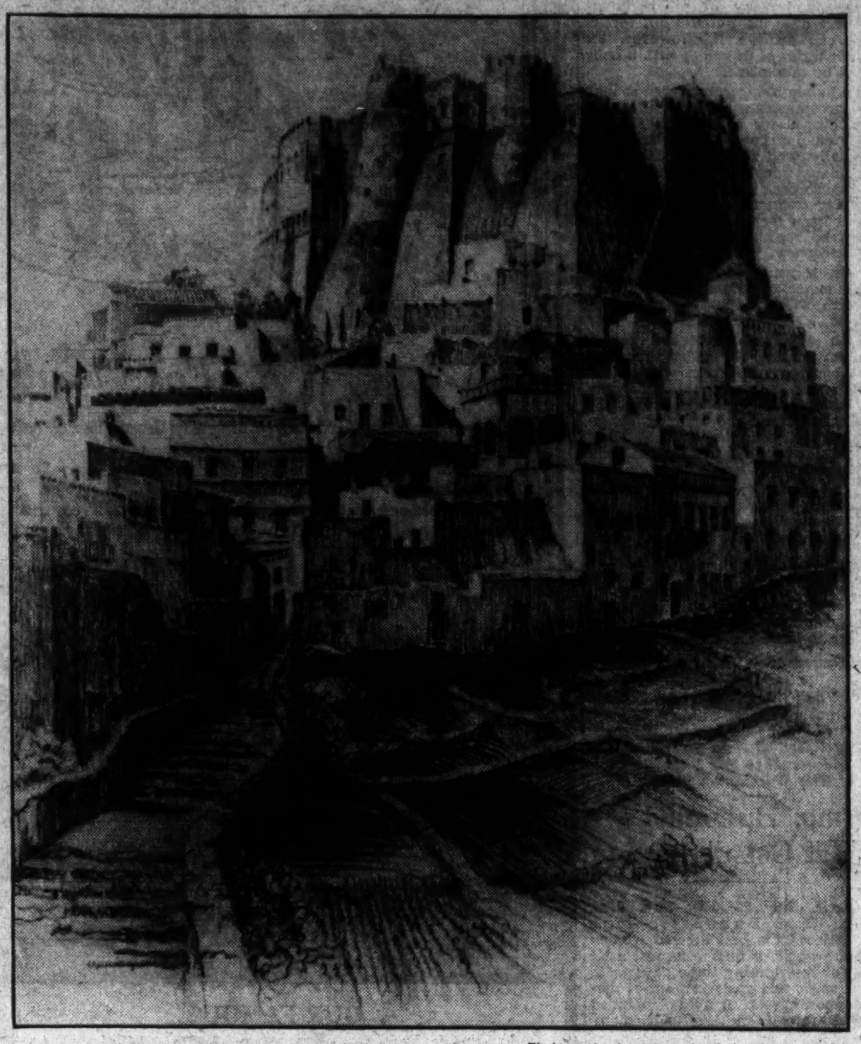
"Talking with those monks, gazing at the colorful panorama of the island from the monastery heights, browsing in the library where shelves were heavy with rare books all this made up a glorious ten-day visit," she said.

Such an experience resulted from an unusual chain of circumstances. If Miss Webb had followed the profession for which she was trained and had become a full-fledged scientist, she would probably never have seen either Rhodes or Patmos. She was temperamentally unsuited for a scientist's career and became an artist.

Now, added to the store of rich memories of colorful lands she has visited, Miss Webb has a portfolio of rarely beautiful sketches she has made during her many travels. Some of these will be used to illustrate her book on Rhodes. Others will go into volumes already planned but yet unwritten.

"This, for instance," she said pointing to an attractive sketch, "will go into my book on Morocco."

But that will be another story.



Photograph of original sketch by Susanne Webb.

On the Island of Patmos, famous in biblical history because of St. John's divine revelation, this castellated monastery now stands, 700 feet above the sea. Miss Susanne Webb, artist now in Washington, had the singular experience of being a guest there, the only woman traveling alone ever to be so honored.

Strictly Speaking

Answer These.

1. Is claret properly pronounced the English or the French way?

2. If you want to see a chaise longue in a store and call for it as shaiz long only to have the clerk pronounce it after you shaiz lounge, who is correct?

3. What will you get if your order pate de foie gras, and how do you pronounce it?

4. Where is the accent on gumbo? What is it?

5. What is a canape? Is it properly called ka-NAPE or can-a-PAY?

Check Here.

1. Claret is an English, rather than a French, word. It is the general name in English for the red wine of France. KLAR-et.

2. You are correct. It is called shaiz long, not shaiz lounge.

3. If you order pate de fois gras, you will get a case or form of pastry filled with livers of especially fattened geese. Pronounced pat-AY-de fwo-gra.

4. The accent is on the first syllable—GUM-bo, the okra plant or its mucilaginous pods.

5. Canape, called kan-a-PAY, is a thin piece of toast or a cracker covered with fish, game, cheese or other seasoned preparation.

Boston's North Church Menaced by Fire Hazard

The old North Church, in whose belfry in 1775 were hung the lanterns that signaled Paul Revere to ride and rouse the Minute Men of Lexington and Concord, is being menaced by fire hazards in the near-by crowded tenements of a later America.

To remove the threat, the Lantern League of the Old North Church, organized to preserve the building, has started a campaign for contributions from prominent American men and women. The response has already been sufficient to permit the purchase and razing of the most hazardous of the tenements.

What Today Means

"Leo."

If July 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m.

Business should start off with a regular bang on this date, and you should be kept as busy as the proverbial bee. Money will be made by a good many people, and there is no reason why you should not receive your share of it. A rather "dumb-bell" type of individual may cause you a good deal of irritation, if you do not try to remember that they deserve more to be pitied than blessed out. Enterprises of a speculative nature may tempt the unwary, but the wise woman or man will give them the cold shoulder.

If a woman and July 24 is your natal day, you should be agreeably surprised before the day is over. You possess keen powers of perception, which enables you to quickly classify people whom you meet for the first time. You are one of those rare individuals whose presence in a sick-room has a marvelously soothing effect. If the practice of medicine, or trained nursing, appeals to you, then you should make every effort to gratify this desire. Any love affair should terminate most successfully.

The child born on July 24, as it grows up, may display a keen interest in one of the professions. It should have an unusually keen sense of touch, and be able to use its hands skillfully. Everything possible should be done to gratify this child's ambition regarding a professional career, and its training should be in accordance with the future requirements of the profession chosen.

If a man and July 24 is your birthday, you are an excellent judge of human nature, and possess a sympathetic understanding of all its frailities. Women and children are especially attracted to you, and have confidence in your advice. Educational work, the legal profession and the pulpit or lecture platform offer men of your type exceptional opportunities. Your dramatic instincts would also assure success as an actor.

Casual Glance Reveals Many Hefty Figures

Too Much Thigh Is Seen About Beaches This Summer.

By Frances Mangum.

THE chief things wrong with the beaches this summer are the sun and the figures.

The sun has taken the inferiority complex out of thermometers and sent their mercury soaring skyward. It has broiled lily skins to lobster reds and planted freckles in swarms and hordes. Beachcombers have learned that sun oils, creams, and big umbrellas are the only weapons for defense.

As for figures, they, too, can be improved. A casual inventory taken at a glance along the sandy shore discloses far too many thighs massive, thighs fleshy, and thighs flabby. Yet no matter the sum total of their inches, they can be carved down and trimmed off by exercising.

Exercise—a word that brings nightmarish visions of a weary somebody, bending, twisting, rolling, turning, racing mile after mile. And yet there are exercises that are almost games. Some of these are beneficial taken even ten minutes morning and night, but taken consistently and whole-heartedly.

One of these is known as the "running in place" exercise. Bend the elbow, clench the fist, and pretend you are priming yourself for an Olympic championship. Lift the knees high, and higher. Continue to bring them up as far as possible. After a few minutes stop for breath, and then at it again.

Don't try to run the whole ten minutes the first day. The idea is to begin leisurely and work into the full time gradually. Three weeks of this and then peek into the mirror for another inventory. Thighs will be on the way to a normal trimness.

If the hips as well as the thighs are in need of a little shaving down try the squatting exercise. This, like numbers of others, is a lot easier than it sounds. First rise on the toes, bend the knees and squat. Up again, and down again. Continue all the time to balance the weight of the body on the toes. Besides reducing thighs and hips this one is good for strengthening the feet.

Other good thigh exercises are the "bicycle" and the "knee raising to chest."

Jewish Juniors Will Give Party

The Washington Chapter of the National Council of Jewish Juniors, will sponsor a bingo party Thursday night on the roof of the Jewish Community Center.

Besides prizes for the bingo winners, door prizes will also be awarded.

Miss Beulah Hess, assisted by Miss Ruth Markwood, Miss Hilda Levy, Miss Jeannette Naiman and Miss Betty Krohnman, arranged the program. The proceeds will go into the fund being raised to defray the expenses of the National convention to be held next year in Washington.

Officers of the local chapter are Miss Anne Sachs, president; Miss Markwood, vice president; Miss Anne Donzis, recording secretary; Miss Estelle Levine, corresponding secretary, and Miss Bessie Weinberg, treasurer.

Missing Man, Depressed and Slightly Alcoholic, Turns Up Again.

"THE Mystery of The Missing Man which gave a fillip to the Starlight Ball at Lake Jackson last Saturday has been cleared up. The "missing man" who was thought to have drowned his sorrows not only in punch but in the deep waters of the lake, has since been seen on the streets of Washington looking rather sheepish.

It seems he was unable to keep to himself the very popular young lady he took to the ball. There is safety in numbers and he wouldn't have minded fending off a crowd of her admirers but one swain monopolized her all evening.

The depressed young man visited the wishing well where the punch was served but the "cup that cheers" seemed to work the reverse on him. And for what he wished at the wishing well he could be put in jail.

• • • •

Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., the hostess, in the true Virginia manner tried to make her guest happy, but to no avail. The tantalizing Southern tunes were wasted on him. He had no appetite for the Virginia supper of ham, fried chicken and beaten biscuits, served by waitresses costumed like Aunt Jemima, with bandannas around their heads nor did he give a hang for the beautiful rustic logwood setting. He was hot and the cool breezes from the lake did him no good, but when the others donned bathing suits for a cool swim in the pool he refused to join them.

• • • •

He was last seen walking through the thick green forest in the direction of the lake. He didn't return, not even to take the young lady home. His disappearance was the cause of some excitement after several hours.

• • • •

There were other casualties that only emphasized the hilarity of the occasion. Charles Bell, a member of a houseparty being entertained by the Misses Frances and Betsy Simpson, fell from a diving board and hurt his knee. Another guest of the Simpson's had $13 stolen while he was in swimming. But on the whole everybody was very, very happy, which one young man expressed when he danced around with his coat turned inside out. Another, even more joyous, hurled an empty bottle onto the dance floor and was promptly taken in hand by the sheriff.

An SOS.

Thomas Leroy Aires, better known to the younger set as Roy, sends this SOS to his friends in Washington from Skyland, Va., where hs is spending a month: "You know there is something about this mountain that makes me lonesome. Maybe it's because I am staying in a seven-room cottage by myself. It is swell here on week-ends but otherwise it's not so hot. In fact I slept under two blankets last night. If I don't freeze to death I will die of lonliness."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am 23. Three years ago this summer I fell in love with a boy whom I had known in my high school days. He loved me, too, and while no definite plans for marriage were discussed, we had a sort of understanding.

• • • •

Then his family moved to California, and he entered the university there. Before leaving, he made me promise to wait for him. He wrote me passionate love letters the whole first year, every day for months, and always several times a week. The second year he wrote in a spirit of warm friendliness. This past year he has written less frequently, and more in a platonic vein.

In the meantime, I have become interested in another man. I don't like him as much, nor in the same way, as I did—and do—this first boy. But if I hadn't known the feeling I had for this first boy three years ago, I am sure I would think I was in love with the one I'm going with now.

• • • •

I haven't seen the first one since he left for California. Do you think we still love each other? In his letters, he never mentions another girl. But it seems to me he would be urging me to visit his people, or coming here to see me, if the same feeling existed. Do you think I should forget him? Or is there any chance of winning him back? JANE.

Break It Off.

DEAR JANE: Under the circumstances as you state them, I think you may as well forget the Californian. Since he is not pressing you to remember your promise, as the time draws nearer when he can begin seriously to consider marriage, it is safe to assume he is no longer sure you are the only girl.

• • • •

The fact that he never mentions other girls is not necessarily an indication he is not aware of their existence or their attractions. In my opinion, his tongue is tied by remembrance of the promise he impetuously exacted of you. He can not bring himself to unsay his own words, and is hoping you will guess his change of heart by the tone of his letters, and voluntarily offer to set him free.

• • • •

To do so is your only course. Once he feels he is free to choose from the whole world of girls, and that you have no desire to hold him to a three-year-old pledge, his first feeling for you may reassert itself. Certainly your pride and self-sufficiency will command his increased respect, and you will have cleared the atmosphere for a future meeting.

Don't think, however, that I hold out any real hope for a resumption or continuance of the romance which first blossomed. I don't. I think it's died the natural death which three years' unbroken separation practically invited.

• • • •

Console yourself with the thought that if and when you meet again, you will likely find yourselves comparative strangers. To meet in such guise as a couple dutifully affianced would be awkward indeed.

In the normal evolution of the individual, such great changes in temperament, personality, standards and even in appearance occur between the ages of 20 and 23, that the person who fits the pattern of one's ideal at the earlier age, scarcely conforms at any point at 23.

• • • •

I don't think you are in love with the boy on hand. Nor do I think you particularly committed to the absentee. I think rather you are in love with love. First romance is seldom more than the draping of our idealism on some convenient human peg. When real love comes along, we recognize the first fancy for the gossamer unreality it was. I suggest you wait for the man who can make the memory of your Californian as unsubstantial as his memory makes your present beau unsatisfactory. H. M.

Black Satin for Autumn Is Best Seller Already

Enter, black satin. The style stage is set with linens, piques, and ginghams, but suddenly from a door marked "fall" there looms under the full beam of the fashion spotlight, black satin, soft and glossy.

It has come weeks before its cue. But like the early bird it is garnering results. Purchasers are already raving over black satin dresses with tailored capes and jackets and black satin gloves and berets are best sellers.

London Dowager Shops, Carrying Chair With Her

Women who are exhausted by a day's shopping might take a tip from the London dowager who recently took her own chair when she went shopping. Followed by a stately chauffeur bearing a white enameled bathroom chair, the woman proceeded from counter to counter in Harrod's department store. Whenever a bargain struck her fancy the chair was set in position for her comfort and the chauffeur stood at attention while she made her purchases.

With Brief Case and Enthusiasm Feminine Brain Truster Arrives

"They have acquired vocabulary," defends Dr. Dorothy Nyswander in behalf of scholars in government. She is Utah's contribution to the Brain Trust.

Dr. Nyswander Is Latest Addition to Ranks of FERA.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

HER brown eyes wide with interest and a brief case under her arm, Dr. Dorothy Bird Nyswander, Utah's feminine contribution to the Brain Trust, arrived in Washington yesterday. Recently appointed Federal emergency relief director of women's work in 11 western States, the youthfully energetic professor of psychology in the University of Utah, came to the Capitol to learn more about her new job.

She will spend the next few days conferring with Acting Administrator Aubrey Williams and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, women's director of FERA. Then she will plunge into the gigantic task to which she has devoted much of her spare time without compensation since last November. Having closed a summer course at the university Thursday, she will give full time to the emergency program until October, when she will again resume classes.

Woman Brain Truster? Dr. Nyswander was neither offended nor flattered by the title. Smiling, she came back with. "We grow them out in Utah." She explained the FERA in her State was virtually manned by experts enlisted from universities and colleges.

Enthusiastic About FERA.

Having worked after teaching hours on relief projects and devoted much of her spare time to experimental work along this line, Dr. Nyswander is frankly enthusiastic about the FERA. The women's phase of the work especially interests her.

"The program throughout is sound and scientifically planned," she said. "Each project is made to serve a multifold purpose. Under the direction of the women's division, thousands who need work are gainfully employed. Their efforts are expended in making use of the Nation's resources and supplies. Surpluses are used up, and subsequently, farmers and producers are aided."

In illustration, she cited the four factories being erected in Utah in an effort to utilize a large share of the cotton surplus. There, women will be employed in manufacturing 10,000 mattresses and 20,000 comforters.

"This," she added, "is only one of 82 such projects being carried out in our State alone. Other activities carried on by women under FERA throughout the 11 Western States include child welfare and nursing centers, text book repairing, food canning and preservation, and recreational and educational projects.

Interested in Handicrafts.

"I am personally much interested in a revival of the handicrafts," added the professor.

In defense of professors in the Governmental scheme, Dr. Nyswander said:

"They have, first of all scientific training which obviously and logically should qualify them in specialized work where expert knowledge is demanded. Accustomed to scientific procedure and experiment, they are inclined to attack social problems with open minds, instead of plunging into the task with a set of blind convictions. They are not concerned with politics. In fact, the ordinary professor rarely thinks to inquire to what political faith his coworkers belong. He is too engrossed in obtaining results. Last, but not least, they have acquired vocabulary. And that is of vast importance as a medium of expressing ideas in their proper light."

Dr. Nyswander, who has a 15-year-old daughter, has academic learnings matrimonially as well as professionally. Her husband is a professor of mathematics at the University of Michigan. Their daughter having accompanied her mother as far as Ann Arbor is visiting with her father until Dr. Nyswander's return trip.

Too Strong on Conversation, Says Golfing Pro of Women

Alex Morrison Thinks as a Whole They're Better Pupils Than Men; They Have More Patience and Putt With More Skill.

WOMEN make better golf pupils than men; they're better putters and are more patient with difficult, short shots. But when it comes to playing the game day in and day out, the so-called weaker sex is too strong on conversation to make much headway, Alex Morrison, wizard of the links, has discovered.

"They talk too much," he declared yesterday afternoon in his dressing room at Loew's Fox Theater. "They talk about the weird hat Mrs. So-and-So is wearing, about the swell game of bridge they played the night before; all this when they should only be thinking about their game and letting the other players think about theirs."

In addition to a prolific talent for talk, women golfers are held back by the idea they can not possibly play as good a game as a man because they lack the necessary physical strength.

"That's pure foolishness," snorted Mr. Morrison.

He will give a public demonstration of his own golfing prowess tomorrow at 4:45 p. m., on the East Potomac golf course. The demonstration is being presented by The Post and by Loew's Fox Theater, where the widely known golf instructor is making stage appearances this week.

Golfers Are Made.

"A woman can use just as vigorous a swing as a man if she'll only get over the idea she is handicapped by a lack of strength," he continued. "It's knowing how that counts. Golfers aren't born. They're made. And they're made through mastering technique and fundamentals of the game. A person doesn't expect to sit down at the piano and play a Chopin nocturne without previous musical training. But you'd be surprised how many people think they can pick up golf in a couple of afternoons."

Women make good pupils because they regard the game as they would the baking of a cake, according to Mr. Morrison.

"They consider the clubs and the ball as ingredients and they want to know how they can mix them together for a good game," he explained. "But men—well, men are so used to bossing and managing other things in the world, it's hard for them to understand they can't get a golf ball over the course simply by bossing it. It's the same way with drives. Men are inclined to play golf like baseball. If they smack a ball for a long, straight drive, they think they've done something wonderful and forget that iron shots are important too."

Some Posies

Women, on the other hand, are likely to develop skill for putting and iron shots even when their drives fall short of the mark.

"They have a good eye for distance and they have the patience to study the best shot for lifting the ball out of traps," declared Mr. Morrison.

As for the unbridled conversation—the best cure for that is mixed foursomes, believes the golf teacher.

When women play right along with men, they soon learn that a golf course is a pretty serious place, with little time for the sort of conversation that sounds fine and dandy at the tea table. Men go to a golf course to play golf. And the women that go with them had better play golf too if they want a second invitation." He smiled. "Maybe I sound rather harsh. But you see, golf is a serious business with me."

Boots Hiding Ankles Come Back in Style

The shoe world here is agog with talk of new designs, still hidden in workrooms and still incomplete, which entirely cover the ankle bone. The new models, intended for fall wear and as yet only tacked to their wooden frames, are a cross between shoes worn 200 years ago and something as modern as an aerodynamic car.

They fit the foot as a glove fits the hand—and to make that matter certain a number are designed with elastic insets (just as in grandmother's day) placed in the side of the shoe.

Most of the new models, not yet out of designers' workrooms, are fashioned of kid. A black model stitched with red has a seam up the center of the foot ending at the pointed tip an inch above the ankle bone. It swoops smoothly over the instep and ankle to button on each side, with little black shoe buttons like those seen on a school boy's boots years ago. A dark green kid model has a vamp closed by elastic straps to insure its clinging close to the instep and ankle, and a brown kid model is finished with kid-covered elastic side gores to make it fit.

Julienne, who is working on a new fall boot, has already launched for summer and early fall wear shoes which completely cover the instep but whose tops stop short of the ankle bone. They are generally designed with a slenderizing, tongued effect which rises to a point and are often trimmed with diagonal bands of another leather slanting down the foot. Kid trimmed with calf and suede accented by patent leather are favorites. Black, a new rich red brown, dark gray, navy blue and dark green are the colors most often talked of.

The heels or the new models are a far cry from spikes. They are only of medium height and they have a solid base to balance the line of the shoe and to insure ease in walking.

Evening slippers are beginning to venture into the same high throat designs. Julienne fashions a black satin model completely covering the instep with bands of satin in contrasting color on a slant down the sides. Other designers have fashioned satin evening slippers with a criss-cross network of straps rising over the instep.

Sample Spray With Perfume Starts Trend

Now Everybody Wants an Atomizer and Demand Creates Supply.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT SOMETIMES happens that customers are responsible for delightful innovations in merchandise lines. A case of this kind has recently occurred.

It seems that so many women who received a demonstration spray of a certain perfume were impressed with the convenience of the atomizer that they insisted on purchasing this with the perfume. This trend took the company by surprise. At first it was unable to meet the demand, but seeing this as a fine opportunity to develop something "unusual, practical and attractive," it set to work on new flacon of perfume with the atomizer attachment.

A shipment has just arrived in a downtown store. The atomizers are a bulbless, plunger type which produces a generous spray. There is also a regular flacon cap which fits over the top and prevents evaporation and spilling when traveling.

Water Cooler.

It's time to discard the water bottle in the ice box now that it's possible to purchase porcelain water coolers for as little as $1.39.

These box-like coolers with spigots are placed in the refrigerator; a push of the button over the spigot and there's cold water on tap.

One Application.

A barber supply company has all kinds of interesting creams, dyes, lotions and toilet goods, but none more practical than the 10-cent package of hair remover.

Square paper envelopes are filled with a colorless powder. Mixed in a saucer with just enough water to turn it into a paste, spread over the legs and left a second or two it takes away the superfluous hair.

Sweet and Ruffled.

It's hard to describe the little dimity gowns featured in a local shop without bubbling over with "sweet," "quaint" and "old-fashioned."

There are several styles, one with a net ruffle around the neck, another with a square neck bordered by a wide dimity ruffle, and a V-neck with ruffles forming cape-like sleeves.

Old-fashioned bouquets dot the dimity, some against white backgrounds, others against baby blue, yellow and pink. Here is the nightie for women who want to be both coolly and attractively gowned.

A French Offer.

One Frenchman never fails to interest the gentlemen when it comes to shaving creams and lotions. For years now he has been catering to discriminating men by the fine quality of his products.

At present he extends a "three and one" offer that is a fine opportunity for 97 cents. It is a large package which contains an after-shave lotion, eau de quinine hair tonic, and a shaving cream.

Rainbow Stockings.

It is a rare occasion when stockings change styles. And this is an even rarer occasion.

Manufacturers of women's hosiery have suddenly gone artistic in a striking way, to judge by the new hose on display in a downtown store. To say they're causing comment and attracting attention is stating it mildly. Anytime of the day between 9:15 in the morning until 6 at night there are customers standing gazing at them in rapt wonder.

They're chiffon hose in graduating shades. For instance the brown ones are only brown in the back. From there they fade to a light tan in the front. The blues are dark blue at the seams but a light sky blue in front. Besides these there are Burgundy (to pink) and gun metal (to gray).

Toe Guards.

Toe guards will effect a large saving in hose. Women who walk a great deal, tennis and golf fans, shoppers, and housewives will find that wearing toe guards under their hose results in fewer worn places and less darning.

They look like the "half a foot" of a pair of hose. But they are specially designed to fit over the foot under the stockings. In this way they take first-hand much of the wear and tear that would ordinarily go to the hose.

Powder for Family.

A cedar chest filled with bath powder usually sells for $1. Now, however, as a sort of compensation for the hot weather, it is selling for 69 cents.

The chest itself is an attractive little box which may be used for handkerchiefs, belts, jewelry or letters. It holds an ample amount of powder to last a large family the summer through.

Can of Salmon Versatile in the Kitchen

Take Fish Out of Can, Read These Recipes and You're Set.

By Ann Barrett.

FOR cooking purposes, a fish in the can is worth two swimming in the brook. Salmon, for instance. With a can of this fish handy, in all its pink perfection, you can easily make grand summer fish-stories come true. Including that one about salmon caught in a delicious salad-loaf with cucumber-cream dressing (Irene Dunne's favorite).

You can have hot salmon and rice loaf, too. And salmon-wiggle, salmon a la king and salmon salad. All the preparation needed is to drain the salmon, pick out the skin and bones, and break it up. Then with a good recipe on hand, you're all set. Take this molded salmon loaf, for example.

Molded Salmon Loaf.

This starts with a cooked dressing as follows: Put ¼ teaspoon dry mustard in top of double boiler with 1 tablespoon flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar and a few grains of cayenne. Add 1 egg (slightly beaten) and mix well. Then stir in ¼ cup vinegar and mix again. Finally, stir in ¾ cup milk slowly (bottled or evaporated milk) and cook over hot water till thickened. Remove from fire and stir in 2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin (first soaked in 2 tablespoons cold water).

Then fold in 1½ cups flaked canned salmon, 2 chopped or sliced eggs (hard-cooked), 1 tablespoon grated onion, and ½ cup (if you like) chopped, ripe olives. Turn this mixture into mold (first rinsed out of cold water) and chill thoroughly. Then unmold on lettuce, and serve with this dressing: First peel a large cucumber, slice it very thin, sprinkle it with ½ teaspoon salt, and squeeze it dry (in a thin napkin or piece of cheesecloth). Next, slowly beat 3 tablespoons lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper into ½ cup heavy cream (sweet or sour). Add the cucumber, and chill.

Salmon-Rice Loaf.

For a hot salmon loaf (made with rice instead of bread, for a change) here's how: First make a medium-thick white sauce with 4½ tablespoons butter, 4½ tablespoons flour, 1½ cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt. Add to this 1½ cups flaked salmon, 1½ cups cooked rice, 2 teaspoons grated onion, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, and 3 eggs (well-beaten).

Turn mixture into buttered baking dish (or loaf pan), set this in pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 F.) till firm (about 45 minutes). Serve from the dish, or turn it out and garnish with green peas and lemon. Or serve with a cream sauce to which you have added a few green peas.

Salmon Salad.

Salmon salad can be made in a dozen different ways, but here's a version with enough other ingredients in it to make pretty nearly a full meal. Like this: First combine 1½ cups flaked salmon with ¼ cup cooked peas and ¾ cup cooked potato (diced).

Pour over ¾ cup peppy French dressing, and chill at least 30 minutes. Then drain, add ¼ cup diced cucumber, ¼ cup sliced celery, and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. Or serve it with the cooked dressing used with the molded salmon loaf—adding to this (for a little variation, if you like) 1 minced dill pickle, or 1 teaspoon horseradish, or 4 tablespoons India relish.

Salmon a la King.

For another good salmon dish (a la king) here's how: First melt 3 tablespoons butter, add 2 tablespoons shredded green pepper, 1 tablespoon minced pimento and 1 teaspoon grated onion. Cook about 2 minutes (don't let mixture brown). Next add 1 cup sliced mushrooms and cook about 5 minutes more.

Then sift in 3 tablespoons flour, and slowly stir in ¾ cup chicken broth mixed with ¾ cup thin cream or rich milk (or use all milk or cream). Stir till thickened and smooth; then add 1½ cups salmon (left in pieces, not flaked), ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon paprika. Heat gently and stir as little as possible (so as not to break up salmon too much). Serve on hot toast.

Salmon Wiggle.

gets itself dubbed salmon wiggle—goes this way: First make a cream sauce of 3 tablespoons each butter and flour, 1 cup milk and ½ cup cream (or all rich milk), ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Add 1½ cups salmon (in pieces, not flakes) and 1 cup cooked peas. Heat (stirring as little as possible) and serve on hot toast. As you would likely guess, you can leave the peas out of this, if you like. In that case, creamed salmon is what you'll have.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Goiter and Iodine.

Of the many substances that the body demands for normal activity iodine is particularly conspicuous when it is absent. The enlargement of the thyroid gland that we call goiter occurs because the gland is endeavoring to manufacture thyroxin [the internal secretion of the thyroid from an insufficient supply of iodine in the body. A number of years ago David Marine showed that thyroid enlargement in children could be prevented or caused to recede by supplying small quantities of iodine at certain intervals. Whenever an adequate supply of iodine is not available in the body, the thyroid struggles to secure it and enlargement and overactivity, sometimes attended with toxic symptoms, follow.

It is important that we recognize that self-medication with iodine may be attended with considerable danger. Without the supervision of a skilled physician the iindividual patient is rarely able to determine when iodine should be used or when discontinued. There are many types of goiter. In the type known as toxic adenoma and in exopthalmic goiter iodine, if used at all, must be adminstered with the greatest caution.

The rigid rule of not using iodine in toxic goiter depends, as Marine points out, on the presence of diseased gland tissue that is incapable of responding to the stimulating influence of the drug.

In exopthalmic goiter, routinely recognized by protuding eyeballs, many observers regard iodine as a temporary remedy of great value. In some cases the response is quick and spectacular, with decrease in pulse rate and in metabolic rate followed by increase in weight.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Imprisoned by the Soviets and released after months of hardship, Tatiana Tchernavin rejoined her boy and with him started for Kem to see her exiled husband. In yesterday's installment of this fact story, she told how her son saw his father unofficially; red tape prevented her seeing him immediately.

I FILLED up the form. The boy was obviously upset, but said nothing till we came out into the street.

"Mother, but daddy said you must go to the commandant's office and get the permit."

"But, my dear, you've heard what the commandant said?"

"And daddy said it would be all right."

"Let's go there again, but mind, we must not let out that you've seen daddy."

We came to the commandant's office again.

"Excuse me, but they sent me to you from the permits office," I lied at random. "Perhaps you have already received the permit?"

"No."

"What am I to do then?"

"Wait."

"Where am I to inquire?"

"At the permits office."

The window was shut. A queue was standing there by now, and they grumbled at me for coming to the wrong place.

Boy Disappointed.

We went out into the street. The boy's eyes were full of tears.

"Go home," I said to him.

"I won't go anywhere till you get the permit."

"But how am I to get it?"

"You keep saying the wrong thing."

"I'll go once more to the permits office and then you can go and talk to the commandant yourself."

He remained in the street and I went up to the office.

"Tell me, what am I to do? I said quietly to the hopeless young man.

"Wait for an answer to your application," he said aloud, and then added in a whisper: "Call in the evening."

That gave me hope anyway. I went into the street again and told the boy. He was unhappy at the delay and thought that I did not know how to set about the business. But I knew the habits of the OGPU: it was quite possible that the permit was lying at the commandant's office, but he did not want to give it me straight away; it was possible, too, that they had deceived my husband and that there was no permit, and would not be. Men who have unlimited power and no responsibility whatever do many things for no reason at all.

Plan Frustrated.

"Let us go and look at the Fisheries," said I. "Perhaps daddy will see us."

We walked the whole length of the street and turned back again. We felt utterly miserable.

Suddenly we heard nervous footsteps behind.

"Have you got the permit?" my husband asked without stopping. I shook my head.

"Go to the commandant's office," he said, walking on in front.

"There, you see!" the boy said triumphantly.

My husband walked fast and came to the office before us; we followed him in.

"You see, my wife and son have come to see me. I have been promised a permit, perhaps it has been given to you?"

We stood in silence, not daring to go near him.

"You may talk," the commandant said in the same stony voice, and shut the window.

We sat down on the bench by the window. We did not speak, but just held hands. The boy was stroking his father's hand, his knee, his coat.

Ghost of Former Self.

Did you recognize me with a beard?" his father managed to say at last.

"I did," the boy answered seriously. "You smoke a pipe now?"

"Yes. How do you know?"

"Why you have a pipe in your pocket."

How strange it was. . . . His face was the same and yet not the same. What ages had passed since we last looked at each other! It might have been in another existence. He used to be handsome—they are a good-looking family—he was handsome still, but what a face! Whom did he remind me of? Oh, yes, Surikov's picture, "Streltsi Before the Execution." He was terribly pale, and his skin was coarsened by the wind and the cold. There were shadows under his eyes and under the cheek-bones. The untrimmed black beard made him look as though he belonged to some other age. His neck was dreadful; thin and withered, it showed above the collar of an old thick shirt with strings instead of buttons, and it seemed as though the head were too heavy for it. His hands were rough and terribly thin.

He Had Aged.

When a year ago they took him to prison, he was a young man; though he was forty-two he easily passed for thirty-five. Though he could not be called old now, it was clear that he had not long to live.

The window opened.

"Citizen, your passport."

I gave it.

I signed and carefully put away the permit. Prison had taught me not to show any feelings before the OGPU officials, but I felt as though a weight had been lifted off my heart.

Now we walked down the street together. My husband held the boy's hand, and I walked beside them. He had huge boots on and walked in the mud, as though it were the natural thing to do. Our son, forgetting everything in the world, tried to keep pace with him, chattering away.

He talked of his school, of the journey, of me, of how he did not let me go anywhere alone now for fear I would be "lost"—of everything he could think of. I could see that his father was not taking in his words, but merely listening to the child's voice. The boy was bubbling over with joy because he was holding his father's hand and talking to him, while only half an hour before everything had seemed so hopeless.

"How stupid of me to make you walk in this mud!" said his father, noticing that I was lagging behind. "I am used to it. Till quite recently we were forbidden to walk on the causeway so I've lost the habit of it."

Guarded by Wire.

"That's nothing, daddy, I don't like walking on the causeway, and it's not very muddy here," the boy said with conviction, getting another galoshful of liquid mud.

"Where are we going? Where did you put up?" my husband asked. "It was so dreadful that I could not do anything for you. We are kept in the camp behind barbed wire and are not allowed to speak to anyone in the town. I simply did not know what to do—and the train arrives at night, too."

"Everything turned out splendidly," I reassured him. "We've put up with some townspeople, very nice women."

"The townspeople are very nice. It's much better than in the hotel, of course, there it's full of spies. But I can't come with you now. I must go back to work. I've let off on business," he remembered suddenly.

Piece of Luck.

"How? Daddy, darling, why?"

The boy and I were so grieved that he gave in, though perhaps it was not safe for him to do so.

"I'll call in for a minute, then go to work and return by 4 o'clock; the day will soon pass."

We said nothing. It was dreadful to feel all the time that he was a slave.

"It's a wonderful piece of luck that I got the permit before you arrived and that we met so soon," he said to comfort us. "People often have to wait a week or ten days, and then are only allowed to meet at the office. And at the Solovki Islands visits are hardly ever allowed."

We went in at the gate. The boy was amused at the way it opened; you pulled a string, and that was all. His father followed him more and more timidly. I saw that he had lost the habit of houses and that being constantly forbidden to do this and that had unnerved him.

"Come in, daddy. This is the kitchen and the next room is ours."

Child Chats

THE tired mother's idea of a perfect vacation would be to leave the baby at home in such competent care as to eliminate worry over his welfare, but few of us can achieve it. However, the difficulties of traveling with a baby can be minimized.

A handy refrigerator, large enough to accommodate six bottles, can be purchased for as little as $1. Intended for beer bottles, it serves equally well for milk. This is an insulated metal container, with space to pack ice around the bottles. Under ordinary conditions the ice will keep for 12 hours and usually can be replenished along the way if necessary.

Or, if your baby is healthy and the doctor approves, powdered milk which will not sour can be substituted.

An excellent precooked cereal, approved by physicians, requires no cooking. Just mix with warm milk and it is ready! Almost any roadside restaurant will warm the milk, or if you are camping, an inexpensive, solidified alcohol stove makes it possible to heat the milk along the wayside.

The stores are showing several varieties of paper diapers. Equally satisfactory is a pair of net pants, with a pad to be inserted which can be disposed of easily, doing away with the daily wash.

Every mother needs a change and it is folly to forfeit an opportunity to go places because she has no place to leave the baby.

Mme. Dubonnet's Hat Gets Attention

Paris, July 23 (U.P.).—Mrs. Jean Nash—Mme. Dubonette—iong considered the best dressed woman in the world, is said to be just a bit out of the running these days, with her spick and span just-out-of-the-bandbox effects. A note of planned carelessness is the key to harmony these days, but Mme Nash-Dubonnet, who has just returned with her son following his trial in America, never fails to be noted in any gathering of fashion intellectuals.

At the chic Polo Club recently she was the fashion center because of the novelty of her hat. It was a model of black straw with the brim turned sharply up on one side and held in place by two mustard-colored ostrich plumes. These feathers are used unanimously for trimming, and when varied at all, swerve to paradise plumes.

Sacha Guitry's new leading lady was stared at recently when she appeared at a garden party in a taffeta jacket. Cut on new lines, the back running to a point, it had a little short rippling peplum and no belt. The sleeves were muttonish and the fullness at the elbow was caught in with a scroll of taffeta cord.

Lott, Stoefen Beat Australians in Doubles, Boosting U. S. Hopes

Anzacs Need One Singles Triumph

Odds Against Americans but Some Feel Rally May Take Series.

Crawford, Quist Beaten Decisively by Foes' Brilliant Play.

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 23 (AP).—American racquets, muted in the opening singles matches Saturday, sang a belated song of triumph today as George M. Lott, jr., and Lester Stoefen scored a decisive victory over Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist in the second phase of the interzone final of Davis Cup play.

The result was not unexpected, but, coming after the heart-breaking debacle in singles, the 6—4, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4 victory of the American doubles players, served to bolster the United States forces for a desperate last ditch struggle tomorrow.

Americans Optimistic.

While Australia still holds a tremendous advantage, needing to win only one of the two remaining engagements, there was a feeling the American players might yet pull it out of the fire.

Richard Norris (Dick) Williams, the nonplaying United States captain, was among those declining to concede defeat.

"They beat us twice Saturday, didn't they?" he asked. "Then what's to prevent us doing the same?"

If Sidney B. Wood, jr., playing Crawford, phlegmatic Australian ace, in the first match, is successful, Frank X. Shields has promised he will lick Vivian McGrath in the final contest. Saturday Wood was the victim of an upset at the hands of McGrath, 7—5, 6—4, 1—6, 9—7, and Shields fell before Crawford 6—1, 6—2, 12—10.

Odds Favor Aussies.

While admiring Shields' fine college spirit the biggest tennis bookmaker, who has been picking them consistently this year, remained unimpressed. He offered 2-to-1 against Wood and 4-to-1 against Wood and Shields both winning. Before the doubles match he had quoted 5-1 against the Americans for the series.

The fact that Crawford simply is not cut out for a doubles player made the task of Lott and Stoefen a comparatively simple one today.

Except for the third set, which they lost, and a stretch of four or five through the fourth, the cool, crafty Lott and his hell-for-leather partner were complete masters of the play. Lott did the thinking for both and Stoeffen was chief executioner on the "kills."

Crawford Hit Thrice.

Crawford was so thoroughly rattled by the fast play and the terrific the bombardment Lott and Stoefen directed at him that he was hit three times by the ball, once stopping play to massage a shoulder struck by a terrific shot off Stoefen's bat.

Quist strove manfully against the Americans and played fine tennis, but he found the burden too heavy.

Lott supplied some comedy for the few hundred spectators who rattled around in the big center court stands. Several times he tumbled to the ground while making desperate returns and then rested comfortably on an elbow while his big blond partner came up to blast an unreturnable shot at the Aussies.

30—11 in Placements.

The evident superiority of the Americans is seen in the stroke analysis which showed 30 placements for the Americans to 11 for Quist and Crawford, and eight service aces to none for the Australians.

For some unexplainable reason Williams let Shields and Wood be drafted for an exhausting three-set doubles exhibition against Don Turnbull and Harry Hopman, Australian spares, following the cup match. They lost it 3—6, 6—0, 7—5.

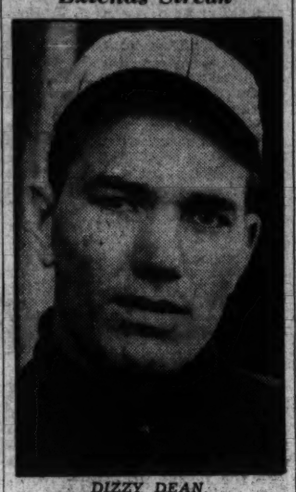
Extends Streak



DIZZY DEAN,
St. Louis Card mound star, who yesterday turned in his tenth straight victory while toiling on the hill against the league-leading Giants.

J. Dean Downs Giants, 6-5, For 18th

Wins His 10th Straight and 4th Over Champions; Medwick Hurt.

NEW YORK, July 23 (AP).—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean stretched his consecutive winning streak to 10 games and boosted his total number of victories for the season to 18 today as the St. Louis Cardinals won their seventh straight game with a 6-to-5 decision over the New York Giants in the series opener. The setback reduced the world champions' lead to two games over the Cubs and three games over the Cards.

In snapping Hal Schumacher's successive winning streak at nine games, Dean fanned eight Giants, to bring his total strike-out for the year to 116. He allowed ten hits, four in the fourth inning, when the Giants scored three of their runs. The victory also was Dean's fourth straight over the Giants this year.

CollinsHero at Bat.

The Cardinals' ace right-hander received considerable aid from Rip Collins, who connected with five hits in as many times at bat, one of the blows being his twenty-first homer. After scoring two unearned runs in the first inning as the result of Hughie Critz's fumble of Rothrock's roller, the Cards counted one run in each of the next four innings. Johnny Salveson relieved Schumacher in the fourth, while Herman Bell took the mound duties in the fifth. Al Smith completed the quartet of Giant hurlers that saw service, pitching the ninth inning.

Joe Medwick, St. Louis' clouting outfielder, injured his right shoulder in diving after a fly hit by Bill Terry in the fourth, and was forced to leave the game.

P. G. A. Stars Start Play Today

Shute and Vitense Card 68s and Al Houghton Shoots a 71.

BUFFALO, July 23 (AP).—Olin Dutra, the swarthy American Open king, today arrived on the scene of the seventeenth annual Professional Golfers Association championship which starts tomorrow and soon had the rest of the boys guessing and groaning.

"Hi-ya, boys" Olin greeted his welcomers. "I've got it again, so you'd better watch out."

Shey didn't have to be told what he meant and he didn't leave any doubt in their minds. Olin was suffering from an attack of amoebic dysentery at the start of the 1934 open championship and he had to be coaxed by his brother, Mortie, to play in the tournament. He is suffering from the same malady again and will start in the 36-hole qualifying round tomorrow with 113 other title hopefuls against the advice of his doctor.

Urged to Take Rest.

"This illnes has kept me out of commission for five weeks since I won the open title seven weeks ago," Olin said. "I was terribly ill in Detroit yesterday and a doctor there told me it would be foolish for me to play this week and that I should spend a week resting."

He went out for a practice round with Eddie Loos, of Chicago, and hit three shots off the first tee. He played all of his second shots to the green within 10 feet of the cup, one of them good for an eagle 3 and the others birdies.

"I've been playing badly, but I may get hot and win this championship," he said, smiling. Then he played three balls on the second hole and came out with a birdie and two pars.

Won Title in 1932.

Olin won the P. G. A. crown in 1932, when he also won the Metropolitan championship and several minor tournaments.

The par 72 Park Club layout was whipped by a stiff breeze today, but it didn't affect the scores. Denny Shute, the 1933 British Open titleholder, and George Vitense, of Milwaukee, paced the contestants with 68s, Tommy Armour, of Chicago, posted a 69, Clarence Hackney, of Atlantic City, and Jack Thomson, of Cleveland, had 70s, and Craig Wood, of Hollywood, N. J.; Al Houghton, of Washington, D. C.; Reggie Myles, of Cleveland; Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, and Harry Cooper, of Chicago, carded 71 each.

Forsythe New Pilot Of Woodstock's Nine

Woodstock, Va., July 23 (Spl.).—The Woodstock Athletic Club reorganized here today. It was agreed at a meeting of the board of directors that Dick Forsythe, third baseman, will succeed Watt Haslett as manager of the local nine.

Edwards, Bradshaw and Boaltz were released due to the poor showing they made in games Saturday and Sunday. It is probably that a change in the infield will be made, according to J. Grove Kniesly, president of the local club.

Woodstock will face three league teams this week, meeting the league leaders at Culpeper Thursday. Charlottesville and Newmarket will appear at the local park Saturday and Sunday.

Baer Demoted to Semifinal On Huttick-Brown Card

MERRIE MAXIE BAER, the Clouting Clown who heads the heavyweight division, will be relegated to a secondary ring position for the first time in many years when he acts as guest referee and master of ceremonies at the American Legion fight show which will be headed by a ten-rounder between Natie Brown and Arthur Huttick Wednesday night. Originally scheduled to work as third man in the main event, Baer was dropped to the semifinal following protests of Jimmy Bronson, Huttick's manager.

"I think Arthur's got a great chance of upsetting Brown and landing himself in the real big time," Bronson maintains, "but not with an inexperienced third man in the ring."

Apparently unworried about referees, or anything concerning the forthcoming bout, Brown, the seventh ranking heavy, and his manager, Bill McCarney, have expressed supreme indifference as to whether Baer works the bout or whether there is any referee in the ring with them at all.

"This left hook's my referee," says Brown, paraphrasing a famed witticism of Ole Sam Langford's. "I do wish Baer could be in there with us. In fact, I'd rather have Baer in there fighting me—with Huttick refereeing."

An eight-round semifinal will bring Steve Dudas, the Young Jack Dempsey, back to the District against Wild Bill Mathews, a Baltimore heavyweight with a penchant for punching opponents decisively on the chin.

Reds, Outhit, Deal Braves Sixth Loss

Paul Derringer Tight in Pinches; Wins, 4-2.

Boston, July 23 (AP).—Although they got three hits for every pair of enemy blows, the Boston Braves dropped their sixth straight game today when the lowly Cincinnati Reds took the first of a five-game series, 4 to 2. Homers by Wes Schulmerich, a tribal castoff, and Slade clinched the conflict for the Reds.

Bobby Brown, ailing member of the Braves' mound corps, started his third game of the season and held the Reds to five hits during his eight innings' service. Huck Betts gave the Reds another single in the ninth and the Braves nicked Paul Derringer for nine safeties, including four doubles.

The Reds pushed over three of their four tallies in the second inning. Slade's homer, with none on in the eighth, ended the Reds' scoring.

Foxx Slams Pair; A's Nose Out Tribe

Macks' Three Runs in 9th Triumph, 11 to 9.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 23 (AP).—Three home runs, two by Jimmy Foxx, gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 11-to-9 victory over the Cleveland Indians today.

The Indians had a one-run lead in the ninth when, with two out, Foxx clouted his second homer of the day, scoring Coleman, and Higgins followed with another.

Earlier in the game, Coleman also had punched a four-base sizzler, while Trosky had hit his nineteenth for the Indians. The Cleveland team completed its 100th double play of the season, leading all other major league clubs in this department.

Tigers Down Red Sox by 7-2 Count

Detroit Greets Boston With 14-Hit Attack Behind Bridges.

4 Errors Aid League Leaders, Reynold's Homer Futile.

DETROIT, July 23 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, which have yet to defeat the Tigers at Navin Field this season, kept their record intact today by going down before Detroit to the tune of 7 to 2.

The Tigers welcomed the Red Sox in the series opener by a brisk bombardment of 14 hits which included a triple by Owen, doubles by Fox and Greenberg and 11 singles.

Ostermueller and Bridges were the opposing pitchers, the latter allowing seven hits which were kept nicely scattered. One of the Boston safeties was a home run by Reynolds in the fourth inning. The bases were empty at the time.

The other Boston run came in the seventh n a single by Lary, a pass to Ostermueller and a double by Werber.

Boston Errors Help.

Four Boston errors helped the Tigers with their scoring. With the score tied in the fourth, the Tigers combined two singles, a pass and a double for a brace of runs which put them into the lead. Two more runs came in the seventh when Gehringer singled, Rogell sacrificed, Greenberg doubled and Morgan muffed Owen's hit. The last two Detroit runs were chalked up in the eighth when the Tigers combined a pass, a sacrifice and two singles.

A potential Boston rally died in the sixth when, with two men on base, Rogell, Gehringer and Greenberg worked a double-play and Porter popped for the third out.

Ruffing Coasts to His 10th, 5-2; Gehrig, Crosetti Hit for Circuit.

ST. LOUIS, July 23 (AP).—With the temperature hovering around 108 degrees, Charlie Ruffing, the Yankees, big red-headed right-hand pitcher, turned in his tenth victory of the season today as the New York Yankees defeated the St. Louis Browns 5 to 2.

The Yanks made only six hits off Bump Hadley and his successor, Ivy Paul Andrews, but they made them count. Lou Gehrig hit his twenty-seventh home run with nobody on in the fifth and Frankie Crosetti propelled another four-bagger into the left field bleachers in the sixth with Sam Byrd on base.

The New Yorkers received a gift of the other two runs, when Hadley handed out three free tickets to first and Clift fumbled Ruffing's grounder.

The Pelican Wins Thrilling Five Furlong Duel From Crazy Jane at Rockingham

Pair Is Never More Than a Neck Apart

Crazy Jane's Win Streak Stops at Two; Three of Five for The Pelican.

SALEM, N. H., July 23 (AP).—In a driving finish, J. D. Mikel's The Pelican, once a star performer for J. E. Widener, today accounted for his third victory in five starts at Rockingham Park as he won the 5-furlong dash for high-class claimers.

Ridden by Tommy King, the 4-year-old gelding, a son of the famous Haste, took command at the half-mile post and from there to the finish held a head-advantage over Mrs. R. T. Flippen's Crazy Jane.

Neck Margin All the Way.

There never was more than a neck between the pair from the time they left the barrier. F. A. Grimith's Bittybit was third, two lengths back.

In snapping Crazy Jane's two-race winning streak, The Pelican ran the distance in 0:59 1-5 seconds, within two-fifths of the track record. As the favorite, he returned $4.90 for $2.

Gallaclay Winner With Westrope Up

Scores by Neck and Pays $10.20 at Arlington.

Arlington Park, Ill., July 23 (AP).—Gallaclay, a son of Sir Galahad III, running for the Milky Way Stable, conquered four other candidates for next Saturday's $25,000 added futurity today at Arlington Park.

Gallaclay, ridden by Jack Westrope, got home a neck in front of the Augley Farm's Show Boy, a non-eligible for the big 2-year-old event. C. V. Whitney's Blackmail, which will be coupled with Today in the Futurity, was third. Gallaclay ran 5½ furlongs in 1:06 1-5, and paid $10.20 to win.

The silks of Mrs. Roy Carruthers, of Lexington, Ky., were carried to victories in the fifth and sixth races, with Eddie Arcaro riding both winners. He booted Bye Lo home in the fifth, beating out Top Horn and Listening, which landed second and third. Bye Lo raced 5½ furlongs in 1:05 3-5, and paid $11.32.

ALL FORLORN followed in close attendance of the early pace, responded gamely when called upon, wore down GAY BANNER and drew out all through the closing furlong. GAY BANNER had good speed from the start, opened up a good lead, but despite being placed under punishment, was not good enough for the winner. PLAYING ON made a determined effort midway of the turn to reach the leader and weakened slightly thereafter. FRED ALMY was in a position to threaten the leaders. MONKS STAR tired in the stretch run. The others were outrun.

THE PELICAN, away well, fought it out with CRAZY JANE the entire last half mile, assumed a slight lead nearing the quarter pole and held it to the end. CRAZY JANE had speed from the start, fought it out courageously. BITTYBIT, unable to keep pace early, closed stoutly in the closing furlong. POSTSCRIPT finished determinedly in the last furlong. MARCH STEP, under pressure from the backstretch, weakened in the last three-sixteenths. CABOUSE moved up fast approaching the stretch but dropped back thereafter. OUT BOUND was never prominent.

ADOBE POST outran his field to the first turn, drew away into a good lead, was steadied along in front and was in hand at the finish. BIFF, well up, continued gamely through the stretch. WAR PLANE followed the winner closest for most of the way, but weakened through the stretch. OLD DEPOT never could reach the leaders. INHERITOR was never able to reach a prominent position. INTEGRITY lacked speed and was outrun throughout. YONKEL stood still when the start came and galloped along in back of the field.

FABIUS, a trailer early, moved up fast approaching the far turn, was restrained until nearing the stretch, responded gamely to pressure and was going away at the finish. LAURETTA NASH had good speed from the start and held on well under pressure, though unable to stave off the winner. RHODIUS closed going gamely. TUFFY G. went evenly and was worked out an additional furlong. ERECH faltered in the last quarter mile after moving up fast on the outside leaving the backstretch. ALLENFERN away poorly, raced up fast, but weakened in the last three sixteenths.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won, ridden out; place, driving. Went to post 6:02. Off at 6:03½. Winner, ch. g. (7), by In Memoriam—Hurry Up II. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUICK STEP, $9.00, $4.60, $3.50; PLUMAGE, $7.70, $4.10; FRIGATE BIRD, $3.30.

QUICK STEP went to the front straightening out on the back stretch, was drawing into a good lead and steadied along in front for the remainder of the way, held PLUMAGE safe at the finish. PLUMAGE, restrained early, came out in the stretch and closed with a rush. FRIGATE BIRD outrun early, came fast on the outside through the closing furlong. SISKO moved up fast leaving the back stretch but was unable to improve his position in the final drive. DANCING MACK, well up early, faltered when the real racing began. MEETING PLACE weakened in the last furlong after following in nearest attendance of the pace.

Rockingham Park, July 23.

Dear Al:

O. R. Witmer, of Laurel, Md., a telegrapher, and I are accessories before the fact and the fact is that Clocker Mike showed up just before the seventh race today well-oiled, stinko, full to the gills or whatever you fellows down in Washington are using these days to designate a determined drunk. Mr. Witmer wrote that Mike should go back to that mountain corn. Mike saw a copy of my stuff at the telegraph office and it seems he took Mr. Witmer too seriously. I'm not so sure that Mike can get the same results from White Mountain cornas he did from Blue Ridge Mountain corn,but he certainly turned in some of the most sensational workouts of the year on his daily list, to wit: Phar Lap, 6 furlongs, 58 1-5, breezing; Tom Ochiltree, mle, 1:01 2-5, in hand; Capital City, 2 miles, 1:14 flat, ridden out, and Bright Bird tok the jumps well. Three winners today for the boy.

BILL.

First race—Polyfon has turned in several good sprinting jobs at this course and is not too heavily opposed in tihs 6-furlong dash. Looks as if The Heathen and Hasty Peter are in the most formidable of the others.

Second race—I'm going to give Clocker Mike another chance to put over his Color Bearer. He has been raving about this one ever since we arrived here. Personnally, I lean to Charlie Dawn and Wax, a pair of recent winners. However, Mike has been known to be right.

Third race—Westy's Duke came through with a sizzling winning effort here last week. That race repeated tomorrow would earn the major part of the purse. Hughes will ride again and he is a sharp boy at present. Prosecutor and Migrate appear to be the most dangerous of the others.

Fourth race—Dornoch is not the outsider that the morning lines have him stamped. I fully expect him to be from 4 to 6 to 1 in this field. I have reason to believe that he will be in running form and I'm stringing along. Ayston and Jaz Age are good at 5½ furlongs.

Fifth race—Little Stokes is about ready to take a set of brackets and this spot looks auspicious. He has shown improvement of late and seems ready to take care of Pennywise. Khamseen for the show end. Gloritone has failed so often that I can't even fall for that 99 pounds.

Sixth race—Waterset ran a powerful sprint the other day. He may be able to stretch that speed to a mile at a good mutuel. Rock Point should be in he money along with Gabbo.

Seventh race—Brass Monkey earns his feed in these long races. Hardly the horse he once was but still good enough to take care of this kind. Cold Spill and Kibitzer for the other awards.

Warsaw Loses Box Duel To White Oaks, 1 to 0

Fredericksburg, Va., July 23 (Spl.). The pitching arm of Lanahan, Warsaw club pitcher, weakened just long enough to give the White Oaks nine three successive hits and a lone run. M. Christy, Jett and Sullivan hit safely in the third inning and pushed over the marker, which was enough to win the 1-to-0 contest, although Lanahan fanned the next three men to face him.

The contest was a pitchers' battle from the start, Lanahan striking out 14 men and allowing 5 hits, while Daniels, Oak hurler, was fanning 12 and giving only 2 hits.

Stocks Decline 2.8 Points in Heavy Sales

General Liquidation Lifts Turnover Volume to 1,868,790 Shares.

New York, July 23 (AP).—Stocks declined sharply today to a new level for the year under the heaviest volume since May 10 last.

Rails were particularly weak and dropped 1 to 3 points. Elsewhere losses in prominent stocks ranged up to 7 points, National Lead showing one of the extreme recessions.

Disappointment over the failure of the market to muster support after its decline last week resulted in general liquidation and some forced selling as margin calls went out, brokers said.

Explanation Is Difficult.

Market observers were at a loss to find a pat explanation for the resumption of the decline at the outset of the new week. There was nothing specific in the day's news to cause selling. Weakness of rail stocks, however, spread gloom in the financial community.

As pessimism mounted, it befogged somewhat the rosy glasses through which some observers had been viewing the autumn business prospects.

Swelled by increased offerings in the last hour, volume on the stock exchange totaled 1,868,790 shares, compared with 1,237,315 Friday.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks closed 2.8 points lower at 72.2. Rails, utilities and industrials have penetrated the resistance points established on the spring decline in mid-May.

Among Losing Rails.

Among rails, Santa Fe, Delaware & Hudson, Union Pacific, New York Central, Northern Pacific and Erie finished about 2 to 3 points lower.

U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Bethlehem Steel, Goodyear Tire, J. I. Case, Owens-Illinois Glass and International Harvester were on the list of industrial shares touching the lowest prices recorded this year on declines of 1 to 3 points.

Crop and live stock losses resulting from drought and heat in farm areas were emphasized in week-end news and the potential effects of these on autumn trade was discussed pessimistically by some market commentators. However, that was not a new market factor.

Business reports showed little change in the summer tempo. The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated current steel output at 27.7 per cent of capacity compared with 28.8 per cent a week ago.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Performance of the Basic Function of Security Exchanges Assures That Volume of Trading Will Not Remain at Present Levels.

By Ralph West Robey.

Old timers around Wall street say they can not remember a period when the financial district was more permeated with a feeling of hopelessness than during the last few weeks. They have seen times when the volume of trading was less and when the outlook was considered blacker, but always in such periods there were some people that remained optimistic and that went ahead trading on that basis. Now the opinion appears to be almost unanimous that dullness is here to stay. It is not a question of being optimistic or pessimistic in so far as the general outlook is concerned. It merely is that there seems to be nothing ahead in so far as the stock market is concerned, on either the good or the bad side.

Such an attitude, of course, is worth exactly nothing as a forecast of what will happen. It is the direct outgrowth of the dullest period of trading that the street has witnessed for years. Under such conditions traders quickly lose any element of cheerfulness. They can see nothing but blackness ahead of them. They say the chances of making a reasonable living in the market are gone forever and one may just as well get out of the market. They explain their hanging on solely on the basis of inertia, but they always stay, and heretofore activity always has returned.

Function Performed by Exchanges Assure That Activity Will Return.

It seems to me, too, that it will return in due time again. This is not because the Security Exchange Commission is going to turn its back on pool operations nor because the Federal Reserve Board is going to encourage speculation through being extremely liberal in fixing margin requirements. Rather, it is because the security exchanges of the country, especially those in New York, perform an essential function in the economic system.

This function is that of carrying the marginal load of the capital structure of our industrial organization. Unless this function is performed we will revert to relatively small business organizations—organizations the capital of which can be provided by those who are willing to freeze their capital funds in an investment for years. For in the absence of organized security markets, the liquidation of an investment becomes a mere gamble and almost certainly will result in a lower price than otherwise would be true.

Many Investors Demand Ability to Liquidate.

In other words, among the stockholders of every large corporation there are a substantial number that consider as a requisite to their investment the ability to sell on short notice and on a reasonably firm market. This may not apply to those who buy into an organization with a view of controlling it. Their investment may be "fixed." But in addition to these, there always, or almost always, are others who are in no position to make an investment from which they can not get free at any moment. It is this latter group that necessitates the existence of stock exchanges, and stock exchanges that are sufficiently active to make liquidation of holdings possible without knocking the bottom out of the market.

Of course, this does not mean that we will return to the markets of 1929 or to the markets of the first few months under the New Deal. That kind of a market is quite unessential for the performance of the basic function of a security exchange. It is to be hoped that they never have another one.

Nevertheless, the function can not be satisfactorily performed with the volume of trading under 500,000,000 shares a day. This does not give a fiber that can stand liquidation. In due time, accordingly, either we shall have greater activity or our industrial system will start to disintegrate because of a lack of capital. When it comes to making a choice between these two possibilities, there is little doubt as to which the public will select as the more desirable.

Visible Supply U. S. Grain.

New York, July 23 (A.P.).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat increased 8,685,000; corn increased 506,000; oats decreased 695,000; rye increased 384,000; barley decreased 286,000.

Second-Grade Bonds Drive Prices Lower

New York, July 23 (AP).—Secondary loans suffered a relapse in the bond market today, coincident with a sharp decline in stocks, and losses ranged from 1 to around 4 points in the more active issues.

Dealers found some encouragement in the fact that the trading volume did not pick up appreciably on the downturn and that prime issues generally followed a small fractional range, with a few showing moderate improvement.

Other than the reaction of stocks and nervousness of various commodities, there was little news that would have depressed the loans market as a whole.

Sales Slightly Smaller.

Transfers totaled $11,509,000, par value, compared with $11,592,000 last Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds, however, was off one-half point at 86.1, the sharpest drop for a single day since May 7 last.

Among the most noticeable and more active losers were Alleghany Corporation 5s of 1950, off 4 points at 31; American Water Works 5s, off 2 at 102; Chicago Great Western 4s, off 2½ at 43½; St. Paul 5s of 2,000 and 5s of 1975, off 1¾ and 3 points, at 8⅜ and 30¾, respectively, Chicago & Northwestern 4¾s and General 3½s, off 2 and 5⅛ points at 27¾ and 52, respectively; Denver & Rio Grande 4s, off 2⅜ at 45½; Erie 5s of 1975, off 2¼ at 69; Hudson Coal 5s, off 2⅛ at 45 ⅞; International Paper 6s, off 1⅜ at 57⅝; International Telephone 5s, off 1⅜ at 61¼; New York Central 5s of 2013, off 2½ at 69; Postal Telegraph 5s, off 4¾ at 43¼; Southern Railway 4s, off 4½ at 54; Walworth 6s, off 3½ at 44 and Warner Bros 6s, off 1¾ at 51½.

Federal Loans Easier.

This division was principally interested in the direct offering by the Treasury of $100,000,000 of Federal Farm Mortgage 3s. The implication was that the Government may be paving the way for periodical offerings of bonds of other emergency bodies, although the present issue was regarded as insignificant in comparison with the total Treasury loans outstanding.

The foreign section was somewhat irregular. Bonds of Germany were lower, but quiet. Issues of Poland, Copenhagen and Denmark firmed.

Curb's Prices Shrink Under Selling Wave

Losses Range to 3 Points; Trading Volume Rises to 299,000 Shares.

New York, July 23 (AP).—A flood of selling orders caused a general retreat in curb prices today. Losses of 1 to around 3 points were frequent throughout the list and embraced utilities, oils, alcohols and metals.

Transfers, which approximated 299,000 shares, were the largest since May 7, and compared with 220,000 last Friday.

"The market was steady at the start, but offerings appeared shortly after the turn of the first hour. The list steadied around noon, but reaction was later resumed. Some support developed at the close.

Pepperell Manufacturing lost 4 points, while shares finishing around 2 to 3 lower included Dow Chemical, Fisk Rubber preferred, Gulf Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Parker Rust Proof, Hiram Walker, Schiff Co. and Newmont.

Recessions of major fractions to more than a point were shown by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Greyhound Corporation, Lake Shore, Humble Oil, Sherwin Williams and Glen Alden Coal.

Deflation in Gold Bloc Nations Leads to Devaluation Demands

By Anna P. Youngman.

Between the middle of July, 1933, and July, 1934, wholesale commodity prices rose 8.1 per cent according to the index of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, while the advance from the low level of March, 1933, amounted to 25 per cent. During the past year the sterling index of the London Economist has shown great stability. Since Great Britain abandoned the gold standard in the fall of 1931, however, sterling prices have increased about 7 or 8 per cent. Meantime prices in gold bloc countries have been declining in recent months as the dollar and the pound have depreciated.

According to the index of the Statistique Generale, the drop in French prices amounted to more than 9 per cent between the end of June, 1933, and the beginning of July, 1934. The decline has been especially rapid since the beginning of the year, being close to 7 per cent. In Germany, on the other hand, there has been some increase in wholesale prices during the past year, and reports indicate that the pace of the advance has been accelerated in recent weeks. As Germany is only nominally on the gold standard, and domestic inflation is now in progress, her situation is of course radically different from that of the gold bloc countries.

Gold Bloc Nations' Misfortune.

Unfortunately for the gold bloc countries, the rise in sterling and dollar prices has not been great enough to neutralize the effect of currency depreciation by the United States and Great Britain. Wholesale prices in gold in France are considerably higher than prices calculated on a gold basis in this country or Great Britain. For Switzerland and Holland the discrepancy is even greater than in the case of France.

The result is that the gold bloc countries, handicapped as competitors in world markets, find themselves faced by the necessity of deflating the level of domestic prices as a probable alternative to depreciation or devaluation of their currencies. Again the position of Germany constitutes an exception, because although the mark is theoretically maintained at gold parity, international transactions are being carried on in various kinds of mark currencies, depreciated as much as 70 per cent for certain categories of blocked marks. Devaluation or ultimate reorganization of the disordered German currency system appears, therefore, to be merely a matter of time.

For the countries whose currencies are still maintained at gold parity, the pressure to deflate is becoming increasingly severe. France, Belgium, Holland and Switzerland are all engaged in trying to reduce the level of domestic prices in order to enlarge their export outlets in face of competition from countries with depreciated currencies, and also to protect themselves against the loss of gold which results from unfavorable balances in international dealings.

The franc, of course, could withstand the effect of a prolonged gold drain without necessarily endangering currency stability. However, there, as elsewhere, a growing sentiment in favor of devaluation is due to the depressing effect upon domestic business of loss of export trade.

Dangerous Alternative Ahead.

If their currencies are not devalued, the gold bloc countries must face the painful and politically dangerous alternative of forcing a reduction in internal wages, salaries, &c., in order to lower production costs and enable their industries to compete more effectively in foreign markets. Resistance to this deflationary policy naturally is encountered everywhere. In Amsterdam bloody street riots have followed cuts in wages and unemployment benefits. Belgium is fearful of similar violence, and France has already experienced serious political troubles, not yet over, which are likely to be aggravated by a program of economy and cost-cutting.

The opinion was recently expressed by Paul Reynaud, former Minister of France, that conditions were growing worse in the gold bloc countries while improving in Great Britain, the United States and Japan. Endeavoring to combat this argument which has created sentiment in favor of devaluation Frederic Jenny, of Le Temps, points out that prohibitive tariffs, quotas and other restrictions are responsible in large part for loss of French export trade. Devaluation would merely lead to the erection of new barriers. Moreover, if any advantages were gained temporarily, they would soon be lost since France is obliged to buy a large part of her raw materials abroad. These arguments apply with similar or greater force to other gold bloc countries, but it is doubtful whether their validity will overcome the opposition to deflationary measures.

Predictions made at the time that the abandonment of the gold standard by the United States would lead to its complete breakdown may yet be realized. Certainly if the franc were to be devalued, other gold bloc countries would follow the French example, unless they had anticipated it. If the United States and Great Britain have gained anything by their monetary manipulations, it is evident that they have at the same time added to the political and economic difficulties of other countries. The effect upon world trade and industry of sterling and dollar depreciation has been throughly demoralizing and the end is not yet in sight. It may be, as one financial writer predicts that by the middle of next year no currencies will be left on their old parities. What then will be the ultimate gain to the countries that led in the race to obtain a competitive advantage in foreign markets by resort to currency depreciation?

Corn Soars; Wheat Values Close Down

Continued Drought Lifts Grain Prices; Provisions, 10 Cents Off.

Chicago, July 23 (AP).—Sizzling temperatures and rainless skies took the corn market aloft today beyond any peak quotations heretofore touched this season.

Eastward extension of sensational damage to the corn crop was an outstanding feature, reports indicating spread of severe injury through big sections of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio—States that previously had in large degree a good prospect.

Wheat and other grains rose with corn, but afterward sagged on account of profit-taking and as a result of likelihood of somewhat cooler weather West and Northwest, with possible scattered showers.

Wheat Closes Easy.

Corn closed firm, ⅞ to 1¾ above Saturday's finish; wheat, easy, ⅜ to ⅞ down; oats, unchanged to ⅛ higher, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents off.

The apex for corn today was 70 cents a bushel, December delivery, a rise of 2¾ cents over Saturday's top. Much of this gain was held in the face of weakness that later developed in wheat and other grains as well as in securities and cotton. Friends of higher prices said corn was confronting the greatest daily losses ever experienced by a crop, and that little apparent relief was in sight.

Sharp notice was taken of reports by a widely known Chicago crop expert who returned from a three days' trip over Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The reports said corn in these States was deteriorating fast, and that if present conditions persisted much of the corn crop would be virtually a total loss throughout large areas.

Specific Example Cited.

A specific example cited was from Chicago to Piqua, Ohio, along the Pennsylvania Railroad, with corn tasseled at but two to four feet high, fields ragged and thin, and beginning to fire. Another instance particularly mentioned was from Effingham, Ill., to St. Louis, all corn burning badly.

Wheat shot up 1¾ cents with corn before reacting. Light rains in the Canadian prairie provinces were a bearish factor as to wheat. Another drag on wheat values was a huge increase of the United States wheat visible supply—8,616,000 bushels enlargement during the past week. Oats were responsive to wheat action.

Provisions reflected the advance of corn, but afterward were influenced more by hog market downturns.

Steel Demand In July Gains; Yield Rate 30

Buyers Inclined to Wait for Lower Prices on Future Business.

Cleveland, July 23.—Steel demand so far in July is proving much better than anticipated by producers, considering the heavy stocks in consumers' hands, seasonal quiet in many manufacturing industries and a strong disposition among buyers to wait for still lower prices, states the magazine Steel.

To an important extent this demand, which last week sustained steelworks operations at 30 per cent, unchanged from the preceding week, reflects the unusually high midsummer production of automobiles.

Last week's output was at a monthly rate of 270,000 cars, although due to the July 4 shutdown the total for the month is expected to be about 225,000. Because of accelerated consumption in this industry its steel inventories now do not appear to be such a formidable factor against new commitments. Both General Motors and Chrysler last week placed contracts for a substantial portion of their quarterly needs.

Specifications Are Cut.

In miscellaneous manufacturing requirements, steel specifications in some of the leading districts have been only one-fourth the tonnage released in the comparable period last month.

Except for the quarterly distribution of material needed for repairs, railroad purchases are negligible. Rail mills next month will complete the rolling of 700,000 tons of rails purchased with Government financing last spring. The most that steelmakers expect from the railroads over the remainder of the year is award of additional cars. Bids are being taken on 450 subway cars for New York.

Structural shape mills are operating at a relatively higher rate than other heavy-finished steel mills, mainly in response to demand from public works construction, although awards for the week dropped to 7,738 tons from 33,023 tons in the preceding week. Structural steel tonnage placed with mills so far this year is only 17 per cent larger than in the comparable period last year.

Strike Outlook and Steel.

With the general strike at San Francisco called off it is expected the longshoremen's walkout also will be terminated, permitting steel for the Golden Gate and San Francisco Bay bridges to flow freely. Because of the paralysis of shipping and lack of storage space, the fabrication of steel for these and other Pacific Coast projects has been retarded and this has affected employment in a number of Eastern States.

Labor problems in steel construction also came to the front last week when the American Institute of Steel Construction rejected the steel fabrication code, primarily for the reason NRA placed erection under the construction code and virtually made this phase of the business a closed union shop.

On the small miscellaneous tonnages of steel bid to the Government last week, steelmakers disregarded the President's recent invitation to cut prices and quoted their code figures. NRA has ruled that the filing of reduced prices on Government requirements with the code authority does not make such prices applicable in the open market. Steelmakers, however, take the position that the code is a contract, and any reduction even to the Government would be a violation of the code.

Lower Price Pressure.

Strong pressure for lower prices continues to be exerted against manufacturers of finished steel products, who find scant comfort in the fact that though steel prices generally have been reduced $2 to $4 from what they were intended to be for third quarter they still are $1 to $4 higher than in the second quarter. This is leading them to seek further concessions.

The net effect of the additional $1 a ton reduction on No. 24 gage flot rolled annealed sheets and the so-called Ford "special" sheets is to make the advance for this quarter $3 a ton instead of $8 as originally filed. Though many prices on reinforcing steel have not been reduced, distributors in New York metropolitan area have cut their price 10 cents per 100 pounds for random lengths. Prices in the cast iron soil pipe industry became so demoralized the NRA declared an emergency and ordered manufacturers to raise them as much as $5 a ton.

Steelworks operations last week declined 17 points to 76 per cent at Detroit; 9 to 52, New England; 5 to 28, Cleveland; 3 to 27, Wheeling. They advanced 3 to 34, Chicago; 2½ to 25, eastern Pennsylvania; 1 to 31, Youngstown. Pittsburgh and Buffalo held at 21, and Birmingham at 20.

On adjustment in sheet prices, Steel's iron and steel composite is down 4 cents to $34.19 and the finished steel composite is off 10 cents to $54, while the iron and steel scrap figure is unchanged at $10.29.

New York, July 23 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimates steel production during the current week at 27.7 per cent of capacity, compared with 28.8 per cent a week ago and 44.7 per cent a month ago. This is a decrease of 1.1 points, or 3.8 per cent.

Peanut Market.

The condition of the growing peanut crop is reported good as a result of recent favorable weather, and much better than anticipated in view of the late planting. The movement of old crop Virginia type peanuts to market has been somewhat heavier lately as a few more farmers are offering peanuts for sale, but it is still below normal. Nevertheless, stocks are being depleted rapidly and Virginia type peanuts are beginning to be scarce. Price changes have been slight during the week. Prevailing prices, per lb., f. o. b. delivery points, range as follows: U. S. 3 Class A (good shelling stock) 3¼@3¾, few lots higher; U. S. 1 Class A (best Jumbos) 3½@3¾, very few higher; poorer Jumbos, 3½@3¾; U. S. 2 Class A (Best Bunch), 3½; poorer Bunch, 3¼@3½. Shellers are not interested in buying the small remaining lots of farmers' stock Spanish because of the lack of effective demand for shelled Spanish at prevailing prices.

Sales and quotations, per lb., f. o. b. shipping points follow: Cleaned, Virginias, Jumbos, 5¼@5¾; fancys, 4½@4¾; extras, 4@4½; few, 4¾. Shelled, Virginias, extra large, 6¼@6¾; few 6½. No. 1, 5.35@5½; few 5¾; No. 2, 4¾@5½. Spanish, No. 1, 5¼@5½; No. 2 scarce, 4¾@5.

Walt Mason, Himself

Useful Knowledge.

The fair Jemina started young to learn whatever facts are sprung in hall of learning, and displayed great talents for so fair a maid. She was both diligent and bright, and studied books by day and night; from class to class she passed along, when grown she still was going strong, and then I thought she'd call it off, and marry some young worthy toff, and settle down to get the good of all the things she understood, and profit from her mighty store of foreign and domestice lore. "I'll spend three years or four," said she, "in Jenkins University." And for some years she made her home beneath that famed and stately dome, and studied many abstruse things, the while her youthful bloom took wings. When she was through with this ordeal she packed her books and said, "I feel I ought to go to Europe's shore, and study for three years or more." And there she went, to some great school, where learned professors daily drool of far-fetched things that cut no grass for any normal, healthy lass. At last I saw her coming home, with fine diplomas brought from Rome; the load of knowledge she'd acquired would make a Clydesdale drayhorse tired; but she, who once was fair and sweet, was now a blemish on the street. In learning Greek and this and that, she hadn't learned to choose a hat. On Latin she had placed much stress, but hadn't learned to wear a dress; a sad old spinster, tired and gray, who'd studied all her youth away.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Benny Is Gone — By Harry J. Tuthill

WHAT! YOU SAY THIS, THAT YOU FOUND IN THE RUINS OF THE LODGE HALL, IS BENNY DINKY'S FALSE TEETH AND THAT HE HAS DISAPPEARED?
WE DO, AND WE ASK YOUR HELP IN FIRST, DISCOVERING WHO SET FIRE TO THE LODGE...
AND ALSO IN AVENGING THE SAD FATE OF BROTHER DINKY, WHO WAS LOVED BY ALL.
YES....LOVED BY ALL... EXCEPT THE BOLSHEVIKI ELEMENT OF THE LODGE, WHO COULDN'T SCARE OLD BENNY INTO MAKING A RECOUNT AT THE LAST ELECTION OF OFFICERS.
LOOKING AT THESE TEETH REMINDS ME OF HIS MILLION DOLLAR SMILE.
OH BENNY, YOU ARE GONE BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.
REG. U.S. PAT OFF.
I'LL ADMIT, BOYS, THAT THOSE TEETH REMIND ME OF BENNY'S GREAT BIG SMILE, BUT HOW DO YOU KNOW THAT HE IS.?
WE PHONED HIS HOUSE. HIS WIFE ADMITTED SHE DIDN'T KNOW WHERE HE IS.
THEN SHE HUNG UP ON US.
THE LONGER I LOOK AT THOSE TEETH THE MORE POSITIVE I AM....
WHENEVER BENNY HAD WORDS WITH HIS WIFE HE STAYED AT THE LODGE HALL.
WE OUGHT TO HAVE A HEADQUARTERS TO CARRY ON THIS INVESTIGATION. LISTEN, BROTHER BUNGLE, HOW LONG WILL YOUR FAMILY BE AWAY?
